Oregon Farm Prices Move Up 2%; U S Average Stays Same
 Oregon farm prices got off to a running start in 1959, moving up 2 percent in January to a level nearly 3 percent above a year ago. This was in contrast to national farm prices which just held their own, reports Mrs Elvera Horrell, extension agricultural economist at Oregon State College.
 National farm prices leveled off as higher prices on commercial vegetables, cattle, calves, and chickens were just offset by lower prices on hogs, cotton, dairy products, fruit; and tobacco. Mrs Horrell found as she studied reports from the U S department of agriculture. As a result, prices paid the nation's farmers for their products held unchanged during January, but are still 1 percent above a year ago.
 Meanwhile, prices paid by the nation's farmers slanted upward during January, reaching a new record high 1 percent above a year earlier, and 3 percent higher than in January 1958. These prices include those paid for commodities and services used in farm production, farm family living, and interest, taxes, and wage rates.
 Higher prices on feeder livestock and on used cars and trucks led the upward trend in prices paid, Mrs Horrell indicated, but farm wage rates and preliminary 1959 estimates of interest and taxes also average higher. Family living items moved up as higher prices on household furnishings and autos more than offset lower price tags on clothing and building materials.
 With no change in prices paid prices they have to pay, the nation's farmers were once again caught in a price-cost squeeze. As a result, the ratio between prices received and prices paid by farmers stood at 82 in January—one point below December and one point below January of 1958.
 This is 18 points below the "fair" exchange rate set by Congress, Mrs Horrell pointed out.
