Over The Tee Cup

Over The Tee Cup

By Jackie Labhart

It should be ice tea weather by now, but all the ingredients in this "cup" are still being brewed under winter conditions. Furthermore, if these adverse conditions (meaning the wind, rain, and swampy fairways) don't change, I think I will hibernate until this "winter" is over.

But despite this atmospheric agony, there are still a few fearless females who like the perverbal mailman (neither rain, snow . . .) never falter in their desire to get their golf ball through. Tuesday we held our ladies day competition as usual, despite a drenching downpour before tee off time. Cork and I are in charge of ladies day activities for the month of July, so for our first Tuesday we had the gals play the entire course with just one club. Most everyone chose a No 3 or a No 5 iron and did much better than we had expected . . . the only real difficulty seemed to be in the putting. "To add a little salt to the wound" everyone was blindfolded when they teed off of No 6. (Which proved to be quite hilarious at times.) Those playing were Cathy Collins, Bonnie Mattoon, Sue Valentine, Kay Robinson, Vi Lanham, Vivian Williams, Gladys Snider, Coramie Ferguson, Cork Norene, Dee Gribbler Sue Jones, Ruth Van Winkle, Velma Glass, Hester Creswick, Marie McQuarrie and myself. I luckily shot low gross of 46, and Sue Valentine and Vi tied for low score of 6 on the hidden hole which was the long No 6 . . . and blindfolded at that.

PARTEE LINE PICKUPS: Cathy really had a stroke of luck on No 6; our foursome all laid about 25 yards out from the green. Cathy approached first (at a high rate of speed) luckily hit the flag and bounced back to the edge of the green, then I approached and lit on the green and knocked Cathy's ball a little closer to the cup, then Sue Valentine approached, lit on the green and hit Cathy's ball almost into the cup. (Guess Bonnie was mad at her, for she approached and didn't knock her ball into the cup, let alone hit her.) . . . heard that Vivian missed one hole completely . . . I have heard more golfers say they wish we could use the fairway, now not in use, as the No 9 hole (just a thought I would pass on to the powers that be) . . .

It seems like I am "scraping the bottom of the tee cup" anymore to find something to write about. I guess everyone is getting so good they just don't get into trouble or make any hilarious mistakes. And the men are even "worse"; I never hear of, or see them making any "golf type" mistakes. Until the golfing conditions get better or in this case "worse" I will have to write the bare facts without amusing ad-libbing. But there is always another day, so we'll hope for the best.

Crops Specialist, E R Jackman Retires From OSC

E R Jackman, one of Oregon's foremost agricultural leaders, retired June 30, after nearly 40 years with Oregon State College extension service.

As OSC extension farm crops specialist, Jackman blazed the trail for many of Oregon's major agricultural advances. He personified the "field worker" extension specialist, taking his teachings out to farm meetings and tours, visiting remote farms and crossroads throughout Oregon.

He joined Oregon extension service in 1920 and has been most closely identified with the state's grassland and wheat programs. He helped develop Oregon's multi-million dollar grass seed industry, promoted face-lifting of eastern Oregon's rangelands through sagebrush removal and seeding of grasses and grazing alfalfas, and has been a strong advocate of pasture improvement programs throughout Oregon.

He taught common-sense farming practices with a blend of agricultural science, humor, and philosophy and with keen insight for the right crop for the right piece of land and circumstances, college leaders noted.

A skillful writer with the human interest touch, he widened his circle of influence with articles in many regional and national magazines. His understanding of Oregon—its people and its resources—underlay all his teachings of new and better ways of farming.

Dr A L Strand, OSC president, says "a man like E R Jackman comes along at rare intervals in any organization. Jackman has made an indelible mark on Oregon agriculture. He has lifted it by the strength of his ideas and the sincerity of his purpose to something it could not have been without him.

F L Ballard, OSC extension service director, credits much of Jackman's leadership to an unusual ability to keep ahead of the needs of agriculture.

Early in the 1920's for example, Jackman encouraged trial plantings of crested wheatgrass that was destined to seed millions of U S acres in the 1930's during the wheat reduction programs. He helped put Oregon grass seed growers a decade ahead of the rest of the country with improved methods and recently set the stage for further Oregon range development with some 125 grazing alfalfa trials in eastern Oregon.
