Year-Around Operation Is Planned By Kinzua

Heppner Pine Sale Details Completed

Final papers were signed Tuesday in Seattle for the sale of Heppner Pine Mills, Inc. to Kinzua Corporation, it was announced Wednesday by Paul Koenig, Heppner Pine manager, and Maurice Brown, Kinzua manager. Announcement was made over two weeks ago that the sale was pending, but final word was delayed while both companies worked out terms of the sale.

Kinzua will take over the Heppner operation in the near future, but the exact date was not revealed.

Mr Brown again emphasized Wednesday that the Heppner mill will continue to operate and that it will be run on a 12-months-a-year basis. He also said that no personnel changes are planned here.

Brown will assume the position of manager of both the Kinzua and the Heppner plants and will continue to live at Kinzua. Koenig announced no immediate plans for the future.

Final papers to complete the large transaction which included all of the Heppner Pine Mills physical assets and timber holdings were signed Tuesday in Seattle. Taking part in the final work was Harry O'Donnell, Bryant Dunn and Ed Stutchell, officers of the Kinzua Corporation; and Winfield Boyd, Yakima, Heppner Pine auditor, and Duke Warnok, Palo Alto, California, secretary-treasurer of Heppner Pine. The Heppner company was owned by Maurice Hitchcock, White Swan, Washington and Dant and Warnock of Palo Alto.

Brown told the Gazette-Times that the acquisition of the Heppner plant will give Kinzua a better integrated operation, inasmuch as a sizeable amount of that company's timber holdings lie closer to Heppner than they do to the Kinzua mill in Wheeler county.

Reports were given by the program, food and hosting committees at this meeting on plans for the annual 4-H achievement party to be held in the Heppner fair pavilion on Saturday, November 7.

A potluck dinner, beginning at 6:30 P M is planned for the evening. Special musical entertainment by the Leonig family of the "Wagon Wheel" restaurant of Heppner will proceed the presentation of pins and awards to 4-H members who have completed their year's projects.

County agent, N C Anderson, asked for suggestions from the group as to the program the leaders would like to see presented at the 4-H leader training meeting scheduled for November 21 in Heppner. Helps in how to maintain the interest of club members, the interest of parents, planning a program, and publicizing 4-H to the communities were suggested.

Representatives from the state 4-H club office have been asked to this meeting to give help and guidance in the county's 4-H program.

A luncheon at the Wagon Wheel cafe in Heppner is planned for the leaders on this training day.

Conservationists To Hear Hatfield

With the field of soil conservation as his theme, Gov Mark Hatfield will be the banquet speaker at the 11th annual meeting of the Oregon Association of Soil Conservation Districts at Salem, next Thursday Night, Nov 5.

The gathering of farmer and rancher supervisors of the state's 57 soil conservation districts will also hear as their luncheon speaker, Thursday, Donald A. Williams, administrator, U S Soil Conservation Service, Washington, D C, who will speak on current soil and water developments.

Major discussion at the three day session, which opens Tuesday morning, Nov 4, with the annual soil judging contest, deals with the problem of growing more and better forage feed on a large share of Oregon's pasture and range lands. Six of the state's top dairymen and stockmen will lead discussion.

Members of OASCD's Women's Auxiliary will hold their annual breakfast and business meeting Friday morning with Mrs Jim McCrae, vice-president, Wallowa, presiding. She will also preside at the supervisors' closing general luncheon Friday noon.

Mrs McCrae, who is the wife of the association's vice-president, believes a farm wife's place is at the side of her husband at the annual meeting of district supervisors.

She says, "Our job is to help get our men to attend and support the OASCD meeting and to show them that we believe as firmly in good land and water use as they do."

"You know we farm women pitch in and help run the farm. What happens to our soil and water resources is just as much our business as the men's."

Hallowe'en Hayride UNICEF Drive Slated Saturday

Hallowe'en night will be the occasion of two popular events, sponsored locally for and by the youngsters of the area.

The older youngsters, those from the 7th grade through high school, will again be the guests of the Heppner Soroptimist club on their annual Hallowe'en hayride, and the smaller children will take part in the growing "Trick or Treat for UNICEF" program, sponsored in Heppner by the ministerial association. It will also be conducted in Ione and Lexington.

Hayride plans call for trucks to leave from the Heppner school promptly at 6 p m Saturday. All will be taken for a short ride then will go to the fair pavilion where they will enjoy dinner, games and dancing. This affair is limited to Heppner school youngsters because of the inability of the Soroptimist club to handle any more students.

Prizes of $7.50, $5 and $2.50 will be awarded to the classes putting on the three best five minute skits or entertainment following the dinner. It was emphasized that all youngsters must ride on the trucks if they are to attend and that once they are in the fair pavilion they will be required to remain inside until the end of the party. Students will be returned to the school at 10:30.

UNICEF Collection Due
Saturday evening little spoons and goblets, spacemen and witches will ring the doorbells of Heppner and townfolks will hear the familiar chant, "Trick or Treat" — only this time it will not always stop there. It will be "Trick or Treat for UNICEF"

Sponsored locally by the ministerial association, and nationally by the U S Committee for UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund Hallowe'en program will be carried out at the same time in 10,000 other communities. Last year more than two million American youngsters participated in the biggest project ever carried out by children to help children.

Each penny collected by the trick or treaters wearing the UNICEF black and orange tag Saturday night can mean five glasses of milk for a needy child overseas, or the BCG vaccine to protect him from tuberculosis. A nickel's worth of UNICEF pennicillin will cure a child of yaws, a crippling tropical disease.

The junior citizens of Heppner participating in Trick or Treat for UNICEF will meet at their respective churches at 6:30. They will canvass the neighborhood in small groups, escorted by young adults who are also volunteering their time. After the collection, all will meet at the Episcopal parish hall where a counting party will be held with some good movies.

The Reverend, Mr Rydgren, pastor of Hope Lutheran church and chairman of the ministerial association points out that UNICEF is not a give-away program. Governments that request its aid spend an average of more than $2.50 for each $1.00 received in UNICEF supplies. UNICEF is entirely supported by voluntary contributions. About 90% comes from governments and the rest from organizations or individuals. In 1958, 87 countries contributed 20 million dollars. Assistance given is on the basis of need, regardless of political belief, race or creed—a basic concept of all UN assistance—and differences that mean nothing to children.

GAME LAW VIOLATORS TO FACE CIVIL COURT ACTION IN FUTURE

In addition to the criminal penalties now imposed, game law violators will in the future face civil court action as well for unlawfully killing game animals. Such court action would be instituted against the offender by the state for the collection of damages to the public game resources.

Such a precedent was set up last Friday, when the game commission at its regular monthly meeting declared it to be the policy of the commission to make every attempt to collect statutory damages for unlawfully taken game animals as provided by ORS 496.705.

Phil Schneider, state game director, speaking for the commissioners, said the civil action policy was adopted in an attempt to provide an additional deterrent to the willful violation of the hunting laws.

Although the law providing for the recovery of damages to the state has been on the statutes for some time, Schneider said that the commission has been reluctant in the past to use the tool against game law offenders.

Flagrant violations, increasing in number the past few years, prompted the commission to take a closer look at the situation from which the damage recovery policy was adopted.

Under the statutes provided by ORS 496.705, the game commission has the authority to institute suit for recovery of damages for the unlawful killing of any of the game birds and animals which are the property of the state. The statute sets the liability for the illegal killing of game birds and animals shall be as follows: elk, not less than $100 nor more than $300; deer, not less than $100 nor more than $200; mountain sheep, not less than $100 nor more than $300; mountain goat, not less than $100 nor more than $300; antelope, not less than $100 nor more than $200; any protected game bird or waterfowl, not less than $2 nor more than $5.

Such civil liability shall be in addition to other penalties as prescribed in this act for the unlawful killing of game birds and animals.

Schneider said that under the policy the commission will institute civil suit for recovery of damages when a defendant has been convicted of the crime of unlawfully killing game animals, and where a defendant was not convicted, but sufficient evidence exists to sustain recovery.

Although not limited to the following categories, civil action would be considered when the crime included killing game out of season; killing by prohibited methods; exceeding the bag limit; killing illegal animals (does, spikes, etc.); lack of license or improper license or tag; and killing in preserves or other unauthorized place.
