Chats With Your Home Agent

By ESTHER KIRMIS
I can't think of anything more likely to take one's mind off the cold winter weather than to chat about spring fashions for 1960. You know the phrase, "If winter is here, can spring be far behind?"

If you've been watching the fashion news in your Sunday papers you've perhaps noted that more than 200 fashion editors from all sections of the country met in New York City last week for the 34th national press week showing of the new decade in clothes for women of the world.

Dorothy Roe, Associated Press women's editor, says that the New York designers are ushering in a new decade of astronomical fashions for women of the space age.

Designers have concentrated on lightweight, easy-care fabrics in all-climate, all occasion, year-round outfits to suit the needs of the globe-trotting women who may in this decade take jaunts to London and Paris or maybe even outer space.

Specifically the 1960 silhouette

Sewing Club Meets At Penland Home

has width at the top, achieved by a myriad of new sleeve treatments. Skirts for daytime wear are usually slender, often tapered toward the hemline, short enough to be modern, long enough to cover the kneecaps.

Suit jackets are longer, but the perennial chanel jacket and the brief boxy jacket are still available, for women who love their casual ease.

The dress-and-jacket costume remains an essential part of every women's wardrobe and is seen this spring in all fabrics and all degrees of formality.

The most popular spring coat silhouette is straight in front, cape-backed often short-sleeved, with deep armholes and a wrap-py look.

New and important is the white town coat seen most often in light, spongy textured woens. Pale beiges and grays also are much favored in both coats and suits.

There's a look of precise tailoring in the new suits, but no construction. Waistlines are never nipped, shoulders are unpadded, but the silhouette is carefully shaped to the natural lines of the figure, giving femininity without exaggeration.

The whole world is geared for travel in this new era, and New York designers have keyed their fashions accordingly.

Packability, crush-resistance, lightness and versatility are the criteria of the successful new clothes, right for wear in town or country, at home or abroad.

Fabrics have never been more beautiful or more functional, woolens are as light as silks, cottons, and synthetic blends appear for all occasions, and knowing good taste is apparent throughout.

These are not extreme or gadgety fashions to be worn as a season's fad. These are clothes for a new philosophy of dressing, planned for a world round wardrobe, to see a woman smartly through any occasion in any locale.

The variations in silhouette—the puffed, tubular, cape, dolman or pleated sleeve treatments, the occasional longer waistlines, the discreet trimmings of braid or buttons, the degrees of skirt fullness—all are unimportant ripples in an overall effect of American clothes that have come of age, international in design, universal in appeal.

Cow Belles Meat Day Meets With Success

Despite the wintery weather some 75 people were on hand to witness the meat demonstration, "Boning Up on Meat" held at the Heppner fair pavilion on Friday, January 15 featuring demonstrator John Landers, Oregon State College animal husbandry specialist, and Esther Kirmis, Morrow county extension agent. This meat demonstration, sponsored by the Morrow County Cowbelles, was a part of the two-day program of the Morrow County Livestock Growers Association's annual meeting.

A meat thermometer was awarded to Mrs George Kruger, Heppner, for identifying most correctly, five cuts of meat in the meat quiz at the beginning of the meeting.

Mr Landers and Miss Kirmis discussed such things as how to select meat, how to care for meat, and how to cook meat by various moist and dry heat methods, and how to develop flavors.

A roast shoulder of lamb, and beef stroganoff were prepared by Miss Kirmis for sampling. Mr

Landers did the carving.

A special film, "Over the Back Yard Grill" was shown to give tips on outdoor meat cookery.

The Cowbelles, under the direction of Mrs Raymond French, president, secured several good bulletins on beef, lamb, and more meals from meat which were distributed to the crowd.

Several cuts of meat, given away as door prizes, went to Mrs Randall Martin, Mrs Prudy Casebeer, and Mrs William Heath of Heppner; and Mrs Burl Wattenburger of Echo.

Coffee and cake was served at the close of the meeting by the Cowbelles.

BOARDMAN

Boardman has about six inches of snow, with the temperature ranging from about 18 above in the morning to around 30 above in the afternoon. Snow fell steadily here all day Saturday and most of the night, but as the temperature was above freezing at the time most of the snow melted as it fell. Otherwise the snow depth would be quite different.

The 4-H sewing club met at the home of their leader, Mrs Earl McQuaw, with all members present. The girls have their garment protectors almost finished. Next project will be an apron and a shirt. Linda White-man served refreshments.
