Farm Safety Week Set July 24-30; Hazards Stressed

State agricultural and educational organizations are cooperating this year to focus attention on National Farm Safety Week in Oregon, July 24 to 30, with the theme "Enjoy Farm Life—Practice Safety."

Safe use and handling of farm chemicals and safety in recreational and water activities on the farm will be stressed, reported state chairman Keith Sims, Portland, representing the Agricultural Chemicals Association.

Mrs. Mabel Mack, assistant director of Oregon State College extension service and secretary for Safety Week, said information and educational materials have been sent to all Oregon counties to help stress farm safety not only for the special week but for the entire year.

Accidents to farm people cost the nation an estimated $1 billion yearly, according to the National Safety Council which points out that there are four times as many accidental deaths in farming than in manufacturing.

Oregon 4-H youths will take an active part in this year's program, calling attention to safety in use of chemical pesticides through demonstrations at county fairs and State Fair. Demonstration contests with prize money are sponsored by the Western Agricultural Chemical Association.

Safety week committee members appointed by the Governor's committee on farm safety represent Oregon Farm Bureau Fed-
