Gentlemanly Reply

Congressman Al Ullman proved himself a genuine statesman in the recent political incident in which Governor Mark Hatfield, campaigning for a fellow partisan politician, made an unethical and untrue attack upon Ullman's record on the Boardman bombing range issue.

After Hatfield charged Ullman raised "obstacles" in the path of the Boardman industrial park plan and lacked "cooperation" Ullman was more amused than angry. He apparently felt Mark had got into water way over his head and the best treatment would be to let him gurgle for a spell. There was no petty political counter attack and no personal reply. Ullman went about his business of offering the district his own record. But when he got to Heppner, the very home of the Boardman bombing range development, Monday he let the governor have it with both barrels, but with never a bitter personal reference.

Ullman well knew he had the governor caught in a political lie and he waited till he got to the home field of Republican Judge Oscar Peterson to set Mr. Hatfield straight. It so happened that Judge Peterson and Ullman had been working on the John Day dam area development since as early as December of 1958, while Hatfield came on the scene as late as January of 1960. It was in August of 1959 that the Ullman statement on the reservoir area was incorporated in the senate committee report to the Navy and through the cooperation of Peterson and Senator Morse it was available for transfer to the state this year.

It was polite for Ullman to have called the governor's vicious and unethical position "uninformed and irresponsible." It is quite obvious that Mark Hatfield knew the record but chose to ignore Ullman's early work and cooperation on the bombing range and instead branded Ullman with obstacle tactics and "non-cooperation." In fact Hatfield must surely have recalled that he himself wrote Ullman only this year in which Hatfield stated that he would "look to you for continued advice and assistance." It was Ullman who arranged and personally participated in both meetings that brought the Oregon governor representatives to Washington to meet defense department and navy.

After more than a year of background work, including setting up the governor in the national capital meetings, Ullman got from Hatfield the charge at Baker Sept. 8 that Ullman was an obstructionist and non-cooperative.

This is the kind of political untruth the governor peddles in his plugging for an Ullman defeat by a fellow Republican.

But the worst part of Hatfield's unethical attack was that he ignored the full record further. Hatfield in March of 1960 had as a Johnny-come-lately tried to steal the whole show and announced to the press he had personally arranged for the bombing range transfer with the defense department.

It is recalled that stockmen, sportsmen and many others have traditionally insisted no bureaucrat can usurp, shift, transfer or block out huge acreage of public land that way without congressional hearing and approval. Hatfield was irked, indeed, when Defense told him it couldn't be done. He was irked, too, when he couldn't circumvent Congressman Ullman's office. Despite his Republican background professing against ruthless bureaucratic action, he was irked that the transfer had to go through public approval channels. He was irked that congress had to write in the transfer by Ullman's amendment the protection of the people of Oregon in the land exchange. Yet, if this is what Hatfield refers to as an obstacle he is still off base from the truth, for the amendment passed unanimously in Congress.

Thanks not to Mr. Hatfield but to Ullman "the safeguards for the people of Oregon that were adopted in the final action, including the public domain status of the land, were included."

To The Voters Of Morrow County:

Would you trade a new car for a pig-in-the-poke? That is what Mr. Kennedy wants you to do. He wants you to trade in the stable dollar, sound economy and record employment for a real genuine chrome-plated grab-bag. He promises that it is something new, something off dead-center and just plain old "something for nothing."

Let's take a look at a few of the records and do a little comparing. Here are some of the figures of the Republican Administration:

- Employment up 10%
- National income up 50%
- Personal income up 44%
- Wage and salary disbursements up 52%
- Industrial production up 38%
- Retail sales up 34%

These gains were made without the impetus of war production or the pressures of runaway inflation.

And in the realm of the most important function of government, that of foreign relations, let's compare the end of the Korean War, the years of peace and the containment of Communist expansion with the bumbling of the Truman-Acheson Administration. They lost China, Czechoslovakia and other areas to communist domination. Their decision to regard South Korea outside the area of defense led the North Koreans to invade that country. There are 35,000 dead as a result of that fiasco. Mr. Kennedy's attitude on Quemoy and Matsu indicate that he hasn't learned the lesson that the successes of the Eisenhower Administration should have taught him.

What does Mr. Kennedy really offer? He expresses great dissatisfaction with just about everything. That's easy to do. Let's ask ourselves, "Are we satisfied with what we have?" The answer is obvious. Man is just not constituted to be "satisfied." He always wants something else. Mr. Kennedy is an expert in expanding that want into a political program. Simply stated, it is, "What you want, we'll provide." ("Wants" are not necessarily "needs").

It is within the experience and knowledge of most of us that that is not a sound approach to the problems that will beset us. His approach entails controls on our economy which will breed more of the inequities he proposes to cure. Mr. Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture and Vice President under the Roosevelt Administration, says that Mr. Kennedy's farm program would impose "stricter controls than they have in most communist countries."

Many registered Democrats here in Morrow County, who believe in the reward of hard work, perseverance and know-how will find, if they take a critical look at the Democratic program and philosophy, that they have a wider area of agreement with the Republicans.

Let's elect men with mature judgment, experience and real concern for the nation's future. Let's elect Richard M. Nixon and Henry Cabot Lodge.
