U of O Announces World Affairs Seminar Subjects
UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene-Africa, the Soviet Union, and foreign aid will be the areas studied in seminars this summer during the fourth annual Summer World Affairs Program, held under the auspices of the University of Oregon's Institute of International Studies and Overseas Administration from June 19 through July 14.
With a program designed primarily for commodity leaders and teachers wishing to enlarge their knowledge and understanding of selected areas of the world and contemporary problems, the summer course will include a series of seminars, afternoon coffee hours, and evening lectures. Students do not need specialized background on the areas of study, but the program is intended for students of graduate standing, according to John Gange, director of the sponsoring institute.
The seminars planned for the program include one on African economic development, taught by visiting professor Walter Chudson of the United Nations; the Soviet economy will be taught by Robert Loring Allen.
