"RIDE 'EM, Cowboy!" This shot, taken at a Morrow county rodeo in Heppner is typical of the action seen at the event. The rodeo is held annually in late August or early September, either in conjunction with or near the time of the Morrow county fair.

TIM MOORE, MGR.

A WOMAN'S WORLD spans a cycle from pre-schooler to widowhood, says Esther Kirmis, Morrow county extension agent. Helping a woman meet the challenges and problems of family living between the two is the aim of the Home Economics division of the Extension service. Many Extension units are active throughout the county.

Besides the work with the homemakers' clubs the services of the home economics agent are available in many other ways:

Free bulletins covering all phases of homemaking are available in the county agent's office, Gilliam & Bisbee Building, Heppner.

Questions answered over telephone. (Call 6-9642).

Office conferences on any problems in homemaking.

Home visits can be requested for problems which require this service, such as storage, remodeling, kitchen planning, and new home planning.

Newspaper stories. The agent publishes a weekly column in the Heppner Gazette-Times called "Chats with your Home Agent."

Programs at meetings—the extension service serves all organizations who are interested in any program the agent has developed.

Workshops are conducted for the purpose of teaching skills. These are conducted in clothing, foods and crafts, when there is sufficient interest.

"We serve the women of Morrow county in any phase of a woman's life cycle," concludes Miss Kirmis. "Whether she's eight or 80, extension aims to help people help themselves."

Better Living For Families Aim Of Home Ec Units

Meeting the challenges and problems faced by today's women to make better family living is the aim of the home economics branch of the extension service, according to Miss Esther Kirmis, Morrow county agent.

The Extension Service is a part of the United States Department of Agriculture working through land-grant colleges. Oregon State university at Corvallis is the state's land-grant college. The county agent's office in Heppner is like a long arm of OSU. The agents, N. C. Anderson, Esther Kirmis, and Joe D. Hay, are considered a part of its faculty.

The home economics branch is built around educational clubs, called extension units. They are like a class at OSU conducted in the community. The County Agent is the teacher; unit project leaders are her assistants.

"This gives women an opportunity to continue their education and apply it in their own home," states the home economist.

There are eight such clubs in the county situated in Heppner, Ione, Lexington, Boardman, Irrigon, Rhea Creek community, Pine City community, and Lena community. These women meet once a month from September through May to study problems in clothing, foods and nutrition, family life, family finance, home management, home furnishings, and recreation.

A program planning committee (made up of unit members) selects the subjects to be studied. This year such topics as barbecuing, making smoked sofa pillows, ways with western vegetables, creative use of a mix, understanding teen-agers, short cuts to house cleaning, wardrobe building, bathroom and bedroom storage, and cheese cookery will be studied.

Besides the unit projects there will be a Morrow County "Red-Hat" day for men and women interested in hunting, a four-evening short course in January on Understanding Boys and Girls, some dressmaking II workshops, a landscaping tour of Heppner area, and a tour to one of the nearby cities to discover its in-
