

Biology Courses Have 93 Enrolled At Heppner High

(Ed. Note: This is the first of a series of articles on curriculum and various departments at Heppner High school.)

The course of studies in biology, the science of living things, at Heppner High school this year includes two freshman and two sophomore classes with laboratory experiments, and a total enrollment of 93. The hopes to have several students in each class undertake special projects that will be of value to the class.

Biology has many different branches, and each of these will be covered throughout the year: Bacteriology, the study of bacteria; botany, the study of plants; cytology, the study of structure and work cells; ecology, the study of the relationship of living things to their environment; embryology, the study of the development of living things from the egg stage until birth of the organism; genetics, the study of heredity; histology, the study of the tissues of living things; hygiene, the study of measures necessary to keep healthy; physiology, the study of the activities of plants and animals; zoology, the study of animals.

There are many ways in which a knowledge of biological science can be of great value. The student learns a great deal about health and disease through the science of biology. Biology teaches us to understand how our bodies work. This knowledge is important to our daily well-being. Biology provides us with a knowledge of plants and animals, gardening and agriculture are based on a knowledge of biological principles. The wise and efficient use of our natural resources can be helped through the biological study of conservation. Many occupations and professions require a background of biology. Among these are medicine, dentistry, veterinary work, laboratory, hospital, farming, nursing and pharmacy. Hobbies of all types are often developed as a result of work in the classroom.

Boards speaking the primary objectives of education are to help the student understand man and his needs, to help the student find satisfaction for his needs, and, to help the student understand the culture in which he lives. The course in biology as presented in our high school attempts to incorporate these general aims of education into its program by the use of lecture, laboratory, classroom discussion, and class assignments.

Ruggles Attend State Convention In Eugene

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Ruggles of C. A. Ruggles Insurance Agency attended the 33rd annual convention of the Oregon Association of Independent Insurance Agents at Eugene Sept. 14-16.

O. president and former Eisenhower cabinet member, for their "unwillingness to settle for mediocrity and their willingness to travel that second mile to achieve excellence" as professionals and as civic-minded citizens.

On Saturday the agents participated in an 8-hour series of self-education workshop seminars.

The Ruggles report that the sessions were interesting and forums provoked lively discussions. While there, they had an enjoyable two hours with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Penland, formerly of Heppner and now of Livermore, Calif., who were in Eugene to take their son Neal to the University of Oregon.

Coach Stresses Training Rules In Chamber Talk

"Boys who play football should expect to give up some pleasures," Jim Sutherland, new coach at Heppner high school, told members of the Chamber of Commerce in a talk Sept. 11.

Sutherland, who came here from Inverness, Montana said he believes a boy should be able to train and should be required to do so.

"A boy who will not sacrifice these pleasures will be letting his team mates down," he said.

Football is preparation for the game of life, the coach said in stressing the value to the boys who play. It teaches the student to win, but to win by the rules of the game. It is good training from this angle also.

Students should be taught to win, he said.

"If you do not teach the student to win by using his utmost capabilities you are not giving him full training." This is another good habit which football players learn and which fits them for a better life, he declared.

"The game teaches the players to lose gracefully, yet try to win as everyone wants to be a winner in life," he said.

Playing football often benefits a boy on his grades. He is provided with an additional incentive to strive for good grades to keep eligible. Most boys' grades go up during the season, the coach stressed.

Creswick, Johnson Attend Tax Meet

Oliver Creswick, Morrow county assessor, and Bill Johnson, county appraiser, attended a state appraisal short course at the Oregon State University campus last week. They were among 200 appraisers and assessors in the state at the meeting.

The one week course was sponsored jointly by the State Tax Commission and OSU to provide a continuous training program for county appraisers and to help bring about greater uniformity in valuation of real property throughout the state.

Creswick and Johnson drove to Corvallis Sunday, Sept. 10 and returned Friday evening.

Mary Davis, Walla Walla, is spending some time at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank E. Parker.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Flatt and family attended the Sherman county fair at Moro last weekend. They were overnight guests of his mother, Mrs. Lillian Flatt.

"IT'S BEEN TEN YEARS," say Jean Martin and Karen Lundell (r) as they hold up their fingers to signify to (l to r) Mrs. L. A. McCabe, Mrs. Louis Carlson and Mrs. Roland Bergstrom, their 4-H leaders over that period of completed years of 4-H work. (Brenda Townsend, Jo Ann Turner and Karen Hama, members of the Make and Model club, have also completed their 10 years of club work.)

10-Year Club Members Given Special Awards

In 1951 14 little girls from the lone school were organized into a clothing 4-H club, "The Good Little Workers." Now—ten years later—six of the 14 are still carrying on. (Five in clothing and one in foods).

Ten-year awards, in the form of 4-H pendant necklaces, were presented to Karen Lundell, Jean Martin, Jo Ann Turner, Brenda Kay Townsend, and Linda Hama by Esther Kirmis, Morrow county extension agent, on Sunday, September 10, when their 4-H leader, Mrs. Louis Carlson, entertained all the girls and their families at a potluck dinner in her ranch home. The gathering was a fitting close to club work for the girls, as each is now graduated from lone high school and is in training for their future. Karen Lundell will enter her sophomore year at the University of Oregon, Jean Martin will enroll in home economics at Oregon State University, Jo Ann Turner and Brenda Townsend are students at the Pendleton beauty school, and Linda Hama is check-out clerk in the Pendleton Safeway store.

Marilyn Morgan, one of the original 14, belongs to a foods club and will receive her ten-year pin also. She will be attending Oregon State University this fall.

"There wasn't any home economics training offered in the lone school in 1951," explains Mrs. Roland Bergstrom, the girl's first 4-H leader and former home economics teacher. "I was just married at the time and had come to live in lone. It didn't take much persuasion on the part of Mrs. E. M. Baker, veteran 4-H leader, to convince me that I should start these little girls in a clothing club. I think home economics is a pretty vital part in any girl's development."

The fourteen little "Just So Girls," squeezed into Mrs. Bergstrom's lone apartment and labored over their needle cases, pin cushions, fringed headscarfs and stuffed toys which they proudly exhibited at the Morrow County Fair that summer.

"I remember that we did a lot of singing when Donna (Bergstrom) was our leader," reminisces Jean Martin. "We sang before the lone P.T.A. and went caroling at Christmas."

Two years quickly passed. Then Mrs. Bergstrom saw that some of the girls were interested in foods as well. She turned to her friend, Mrs. Louis (Betty) Carlson, for assistance. Betty, a former ten-year 4-H club member herself, had just come to lone community as a bride. They split up the "Good Little Workers;" Mrs. Bergstrom taking the food girls—Mrs. Carlson the clothing. The 4-H misses had progressed into dress making so appropriately called their club, "The Rip and Stitch."

The stork interfered with Donna and Betty's 4-H leadership about the fourth year. Here's where Mrs. L. A. McCabe came into the picture.

"Those were rough years when the girls were in their early teens," remembers Mrs. McCabe. "We didn't know if they'd continue with their 4-H work or not. They were easily discouraged. If some of the mamas hadn't done some pushing, I doubt if we'd have any ten-year members today." "But when the girls began to realize what lovely clothes they could make and how it added to their wardrobe, they were all for it," continues the 17-year leader.

"You could always count on the lone girls to make a good showing at the Morrow County Fair in Heppner," states Miss Esther Kirmis, county agent. "There was many a champion in the group that represented the county at the Oregon State Fair in Salem each fall."

Karen Lundell was especially outstanding. She won the Oregon

Wool Bureau award for her black wool sheath dress in 1960. She and Jean Martin both took part several times in the wool sewing contest there.

The names the girls chose for their club over the years is a fair indication of their increased skill in the clothing field. They began as the "Good Little Workers," progressed to "Rip and Stitch it," and finally, the last three years, when Mrs. Carlson came back to lead the group, it was "Make and Model."

When Betty Carlson was questioned as to what now that her girls were all launched, she replied — "I have a nine-year-old daughter that's breathing down my neck to start a 4-H club for her and her girl friends. I guess we'll start all over again."

Forestry Funds Re-seed Fire Area

Funds have been received by the Heppner district from the U. S. Forest Service special funds and is in training for their future. Sam Miller, ranger, announced that $22,000 has been received to complete the work.

Three big burns occurred during July—Sunflower Flat, Thorne Suring and Ditch Creek. The Ditch Creek blaze was by far the biggest, but a total of near 8000 acres in all three will need to be re-seeded for trees and grass, with possibly some planting.

The area is being salvaged of timber now by the Kinzua Corp. This operation is expected to be completed by early winter, when the seeding will begin.

Calling All 'Hams' Classes Planned

A call this week is extended to all amateur radio "hams" or any interested in getting the short wave radio "bug." A group of fellow "hams" is planning to start classes this fall and winter and all interested in turning out are asked to sign up with Haskell Sharrard at the Wee TV Shop.

Tentative plans are to have classes three nights each week, starting about October 1. Emphasis will be on code practice and radio theory. There will be no registration fee, the only stipulation being that each "ham" furnish his own supplies.

"It's open to anyone from 8 to 80, male or female," Sharrard said. It is planned to have the class in the high school science room.

Home After Five Week Eastern Trip

Mrs. Harry Duvall returned home last Wednesday from a five-week motor trip to Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri where she visited extensively with relatives and friends.

When she came into Oregon the next day the weather was calm and peaceful and was glad to see the hills of home again, even though they were dry.

The county people praised the securing of study funds for the proposed Heppner dam, the Columbia River development progress, and Ullman's cooperative efforts to consummate the transfer of the Boardman Bombing Range to the state. He was praised for his efforts to stop a trend towards lower farm income.

The group said Ullman's military and educational background, his Congressional experience and tenure are needed in a world whose fate may well be hanging in the balance.

The meeting was held at the Paul Brown home near Heppner.

SIG UNANDER

Unander to Run For Senate Post

Sig Unander, who last week announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator, promises a "hard-hitting, grass-roots campaign" in his effort to capture the seat held by Sen. Wayne Morse.

Unander-for-Senator committees will be organized throughout the state, according to Unander's campaign chairman, Wes Phillips, Portland insurance agent. Unander said his campaign will endeavor to inform the people, not confuse them.

The ex-state treasurer, who recently returned to Oregon after serving as vice-chairman of the Federal Maritime Board, said he will go to the people throughout the state to inform them of the national and international situation, and to make it perfectly clear to everyone exactly where he stands on the issues.

Farley reports he was very impressed with the fine meeting and the new models.

Among big name entertainers who appeared before the dealers were Lena Horn, Allen King and Gordon and Sheila McCrea.

Mayor Fishes—No Fish

Mayor and Mrs. Al Lamb spent the week-end in Seattle and vicinity, highlight of which was salmon fishing in Puget Sound with their son, Harry Lamb of Boeing Airplane Co. However, they failed to catch any fish. On Sunday they visited the fair at Puyallup and said that a "tremendous crowd" was on hand. They returned to Heppner Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Parker returned Friday after taking an enjoyable three weeks trip that took them for visits with friends and relatives in Hood River, Portland, Eugene, and at the coast. At Delake, they visited with O. W. Crawford, former editor of the Gazette-Times.

Robert Van Houte, administrator of Morrow county schools, spoke at an OEA meeting of Lincoln county teachers in Newport Monday night.

Ullman Hails House Re-Seeding Program

Congressman Al Ullman characterized as "fast action on a problem of urgent importance to Oregon's livestock industry" the passage by the House of Representatives $1,250,000 for emergency re-seeding on public range lands. The supplemental appropriation bill including these funds now goes to the Senate for final action.

Ullman noted that ground conditions on the burned over acres are well adapted to immediate re-seeding. "By taking action now instead of waiting, we will not only restore the range to usable condition at an earlier date, but will cut the costs of the rehabilitation program," he said.

The Baker lawmaker appeared before the House appropriations committee in support of the money for reseeded and fencing on range managed by the Bureau of Land Management and expressed pleasure at House approval of the full amount he had requested.

"A very substantial part of these funds," he said, "will be used in Oregon where range fires have done extensive damage again this year."
