Burning Permits Required April 1

The 1962 forest fire season gets under way on April 1 when the various forest laws covering precautionary measures within the forest areas and also the issuance of burning permits become effective, according to a statement issued by State Forester D. L. Phipps.

Burning permits will be required for anyone burning debris or disposing of logging slash within or near any forest land, the forester added. He indicated that the required permits can be secured from the nearest state forestry department headquarters or field station or from the forest service.

All logging operations will be required to provide tools suitable for fighting forest fires, equip certain machinery with spark arresters and carry out other protective measures as indicated by the forest inspector.

"Logging operation shutdowns during periods of low humidities will be conducted on the same modified regulations as the last two years," Phipps said. These will be put into effect based upon existing hazard as determined by the field men.

"Although we are starting this fire season with higher moisture conditions than usual over most of the forest area, a few days of sunshine and drying winds could change the picture radically," Phipps cautioned.
