Students Write Essays For 'Law Day USA'

Two Ione high school sophomores, Judy Sherer and Merrie Jo Morrison, will compete in the Law Day USA contest sponsored locally by the Umatilla Bar association and statewide by the Oregon State Bar association. Judging follows publication of the essays in the school paper and in a paper in the county. "Law Day" is May 1.

Entries of the Ione students follow:

"The Law—Wellspring of Liberty"

By JUDY SHERER

The people of our nation take liberty for granted; it means no more to us than night and day. We take both as being natural and therefore, think nothing more about them. Liberty is different though, as it must come from within ourselves.

Having to come from within oneself makes liberty unique, and I believe that our people must learn to understand liberty and freedom before they will live within the laws that their freedoms are derived from. Only a minority of the people do not believe it is fair to live by the law, but they must remember that in America their representatives and they themselves make the laws. Realizing that without laws there would be no freedom, I think that then, and only then, the people of our nation will be willing to abide by the law.

To keep a peaceful world we must have laws to follow. Before the world will rest in peace though, I think there are certain freedoms that the law must make on behalf of the people. Freedom of speech is important to all of us. To have the freedom to worship God in his own way is important to each individual. An important law that should be passed would be to put each nation in a position so that they could not commit an act of physical aggression against any neighboring country—thus achieving freedom from fear.

Without law, man would lose all rights to his honestly earned possessions. He would lose all liberties and no longer be free but a slave. Slavery is a thing of the past to all of us Americans. Little do we realize how easily it could come into existence again. To keep slavery in the past, the people must learn to live within restricted freedoms. Not obeying the law will eventually lead to servitude under one ruler.

Yes, law is the wellspring of liberty, from it our freedoms flow, without it the supply would be cut off and we would die. Perhaps the death would not be physical, but something deep within us would die.

"The Law—Wellspring of Liberty"

the ideals of the democratic nation that was the hope and dream of our forefathers.

Another excellent example of the liberty we have under law in America is shown in the manner in which we permit the Communists to operate an active political party here. Some people believe that we should refuse them the right to work here because we couldn't do the same behind the Iron Curtain. We allow the Communists to function here as a political party because America is a free country and the people have the right to be aware of and to listen to the ideas of these people.

Yes, truly, the law is the wellspring of liberty. If we are going to have and hold this priceless liberty, of the people, by the people, and for the people, we must uphold and maintain the laws so that they do not wither and die.

Without law there is no liberty. Some individuals might think that this statement is false. They might think, "how could there be liberty if there are laws?" These people aren't going beneath the surface and digging out the reasons for having laws. We have laws so that we may preserve the liberty our forefathers fought so valiantly to attain.

We respect and obey these laws, not through fear, but through faith in their fairness, because we, the people, have participated in making them. This is a fine example of true liberty—the right to make the laws by which we live.

We have laws that give us the liberty to say what we feel, read what we wish, and to worship as we please. These laws are derived from the Constitution that was written by the forefathers of our country after they declared their freedom from English rule. By adding amendments, we keep the Constitution up to date. The first ten of these amendments are what we fondly named the Bill of Rights. This document protects our rights as a free person and assures us of the liberty that many men lost their lives securing for us. Our Bill of Rights has given life to

Second Workshop For Fair Displays Set For April 24

By popular demand, Dwight W. Fairbanks, OSU visual instruction specialist, will conduct another all-day workshop on April 24, at the Heppner Fair annex, to give the basic principles in setting up a display.

"Fairbanks' appearance in the county last year resulted in a marked improvement in fair booths at the last fair," says Esther Kirmis, Morrow County Extension agent. "Suggestions made by him have resulted in a rebuilding of the booths in the fair building in Heppner. Uniform booths measuring 6x4x6 have been built to replace the deep, stall-like booths that were there previously."

All organizations that put up booths at the Morrow county fairs, 4-H leaders who make up National 4-H club windows, women setting up displays for the extension units homemaker festival, and any other public showing are especially invited to send representatives to this meeting.

"We will have had our fair booth training conference for the Oregon Fairs Association by that time," writes the specialist in a recent letter.

The workshop will begin at 10:30 a. m. with a sack lunch at noon.
