All American Beauties Highlight Portland's Annual Rose Festival

PORTLAND, ORE.—For fifty-three straight years this city has tied its civic spirit to a big bunch of roses and presented its annual Rose Festival.

A spectacular 10-day display faceted Festival Center and continues through a variety of gala events to its final spectacle: the Golden Rose ski tournament at Timberline Lodge on the slopes of Mt. Hood.

Annual highlight of the Festival is the Grand Floral Parade, seen by close to a half-million people who throng sidewalks along the parade route or sit in comfortable seats in Portland's magnificent new Memorial Coliseum, where the arena is an actual part of the line of march. Theme of the 1962 parade will be "Famous Firsts." Like its gaudy bloomladen predecessors, it will include magnificent floral-decorated floats interspersed with colorful bands and spirited marching units.

There are two other parades—the Junior Festival, or children's parade, which includes 10,000 youngsters, and the Merrykhanas, the night-time, fun-making parade where zany entries and general hilarity reign supreme.

Ruler of all Rosaria during Festival Week June 8 to 17—and for the year following her coronation—is a lovely Portland high school senior, who reigns with a court made up of representatives from each Portland high school. The queen is selected and crowned in an evening program replete with pageantry and color as white-suited Royal Rosarians and blue-jacketed Festival directors assist the radiant court garbed in pastel gowns.

Other evening programs scheduled during the Festival range from ski jumps to box lacrosse.

The Festival Center, located next to Portland's giant Lloyd Shopping Center—the world's largest, features a "Streets of the World" bazaar, an international buffet restaurant, an art festival, displays, kiddies' country fair, a carnival and a continuous round of entertainment on an outdoor stage.

The fleet comes to Portland during the Festival each year, and there's open house aboard ships of the U.S. Navy's first fleet and visiting vessels from other nations. They tie up at the Willamette River seawall in downtown Portland.

Another highlight of the 10-day Festival is the Rose Show held in the Portland Sheraton Hotel, next to the Festival Center. Many tourists follow the Rose Show with a trip to Portland's International Rose Test Gardens in Washington Park, where new varieties of roses are developed and established varieties bloom in mass plantings.
