To Sponsor Library Week

The Ione Topic Club will again sponsor Library Week at the Ione Public Library, September 24 through the 27, with each class from the Ione school system being invited to the library where books will be displayed for the individual class and they will be invited to borrow them.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Rod MacKenzie, a library week display has been placed in the window of Bristows Grocery store displaying new books that will be available at the library for loan. Every few days the display is changing as books from the 5th grade level make room for displays for the 6th grade and on through 12. Parents and students are invited to get acquainted with these displays and know the books available for the child. The Topic Club has worked hard to aintain the wonderful library and provide wide selections. Get acquainted with our library during the coming Library Week and come to know the books available for individual needs and enjoyment.

The Lions Club of Ione held a picnic on Sunday at the Eubanks Cabin at Parkers Mill with approximately 50 members and guests on hand for the festivities. A good time was reported by all present.

Chris DeSpain, son of the Bob DeSpains, was an overnight patient at Pioneer Memorial hospital on Monday evening following a tonsillectomy that morning.

Plans for the work days for the Ione Community church are scheduled to begin on September 17 through the 21. Repairing of the church is the main project. More paint is needed and anyone wishing to donate please contact Don Bristow.

How come chicken's so cheap?

Each year since World War II, the price of chicken has dropped more than a cent a pound. And any lover of fried chicken will tell you it's better eating that ever. What's responsible for this more-for-the-money miracle in America?

One reason is the fast-growing poultry industry which has developed in areas served largely by rural electric systems. Electricity makes possible modern production and processing efficiencies which help make chicken a Sunday treat most families can afford every day.

Today, push-button electricity lets one farm worker tend 30,000 chickens, feed 500 cattle, or milk 50 cows.

This lowers food production costs, but it's helping to double the demand for rural electricity every six years. Already farmers use more power than Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, and Houston combined.

Rural Electrification Administration loans, which are being repaid in full with interest, enable rural electric to build heavier lines, and in some cases generation-transmission systems, to supply this growing need for power. Adequate power at reasonable cost in rural areas helps safeguard the low-price tag on your high standard of living. This is another reason why rural electrification is good for all Americans.
