The Lexington star showed the strain of his heavy point production in the Burns tilt and was off on shooting to be held to nine points. The entire team was tired, but Fred Harnden, Dick Springer and Shan Apple-gate were all in double figures to give the Mustangs balance and come through with victory.

With the two triumphs, Hepp-ner now has a 3-0 mark in the western division of the circuit, and their road trips are all be hind them except for the short jaunt to Pilot Rock on February

The contest with Pilot Rock here Friday night will be the Mustangs home league opener, which Sherman county, Grant Union and Burns all must make the trip to the Heppner corral for return contests.

Supporters of the Heppner five who might have been content for a split on this road trip saw the Mustangs frost the cake with the Burns win. A small but enthus-iastic band of students and parents made the long trek south and came back jubilant.

The Mustangs held leads at all the quarter stops with the Highlanders but the determined Burns five, which was out to stop Heppner in this one, pulled up in between and captured the lead by a point or two at various times. Somewhat weary after the battle with Grant Union, the Mustangs were possibly in a position to get nipped, but they came through with hustle with each of the starters carrying his share of the load. Harnden and Applegate were especially good on passing and floor work, Porter and Springer were strong un-der the boards, and all five shared in the scoring. Of the starters, high was Harnden with 15 and lowest was Porter's eight. None except the starters scored a point in the contest.

Del Berg of the Highlanders was the fellow who kept the Mustangs in hot water. He connected on eight field goals and added two free throws for 18. Dave Woodfin got 10 for Burns as second high man.

Personal fouls threatened catastrophe for the Mustangs in the Burns game as Porter went out on fouls and three others a nip and tuck contest.

Irrigation Water Outlook in 1963 Said 'Only Fair'

The outlook for 1963 irrigation water supplies in the Umatilla-Walla Walla region of Oregon is only fair with mountain snowpack practically non-existent according to a report released to-day by W. T. Frost, Snow Survey supervisor for U. S. Department of Agriculture, Soil Conservation Service, cooperating with Oregon State University and State Engineer. Stored water supplies are currently much better than last year, but below average for

There is no snow at all below 4.500 feet elevation. The January 1 surveys find this year's snow to be only 14 percent of that on hand one year ago at this date. Fortunately, there are at least two, maybe three, months' time remaining for accumulation of a good snow pack. Fall rains have been about normal and measurements of moisture in the upper watersheds indicate the recharge has come up to 87 percent of total capacity. This is better than the moisture conditions a year ago. Cold Springs reservoir now contains 27.450 acre feet compared with 19,000 acre feet one year ago. The average storage on January 1 is 20,200 a.f. McKay reservoir has 10,640 acre feet in storage compared with 4.700 a.f. a year ago. The average storage at the beginning of the year is 26,000 acre feet.

Flow of the Umatilla River at Umatilla (Preliminary data from U. S. Geological Survey, Port-land, Oregon) has been 82 percent of average since October
1. Inflow to McKay reservoir has been more than double that of last year up till now. Future streamflow will depend greatly on total precipitation and on a normal accumulation of a mountain snow pack.

Statewide, the early winter outlook for Oregon's 1963 irrigation water supplies is fair. Snow cover, in measurable amounts, is found only at high elevations and surveys there range from 0 to 33 percent of the usual January 1 snow water amounts. Reservoir storage is much better than last year this time and, coupled with good soil moisture conditions over most of the state, is likely to be the safety factor needed to offset a low snow year. Fort-unately, there are still two or three months remaining to im-prove this low snow pack.
