4-H SERVES IN MANY FIELDS

Widespread changes in agricultural technology in recent years are being faced squarely in 4-H. Leaders realize it is neither possible nor desirable for all farm youth to stay on farms. So rural members and others receive help in becoming well-rounded individuals who can earn and serve in many fields. This informal out-of-school learning supplements the training given in the home, school, church, and elsewhere. Popular 4-H projects, meeting youth needs today in both rural and suburban areas, include career exploration, automotive care and safety, electrification, health and nutrition, personality improvement, leadership and citizenship development.
