478 Accidental Poisonings Told In State in 1962

There's virtually no limit to the poisonous substances which people accidentally swallow each year, especially children under three years of age, Carl G. Ashley, M. D., director of the maternal and child health section, Oregon State Board of Health, reported today.

This fact is proven by the Oregon Poison Control Registry which received 478 reports of accidental poisonings occurring to Oregonians during the past year.

Their annual report listed 271 cases of poisoning from accidental ingestion of internal medicines, 109, or 40%, which were caused by overdoses of aspirin. Other sources of poisoning included: external medicine, 32 cases; household preparations, 55; petroleum products, 12; cosmetics, 9; pesticides, 42; poisonous plants, 11; painting supplies, 8; veterinary supplies, 1; and other or unspecified, 2.

The greatest single cause of accidental poisoning after aspirin was barbiturate sedatives, 37 cases; insecticides, 27; tranquilizing drugs, 19; analgesics other than aspirin, 16; non-barbiturate sedatives, 13; antiseptics, 13; lotions and medicated ointments, 11; and bleach and detergents, 11 cases.

Numerous other substances were swallowed by Oregonians, such as, deodorants, lighter fluid, shoe polish, toothpastes, and paint. Fifteen, or 3.1%, of the cases reported to the registry resulted in death. In addition, an undetermined number suffered permanent damage as a result of their accidental poisoning, Dr. Ashley stated.

The Oregon Poison Control Registry was established in 1958 as an around-the-clock clearing-house of information on poisons for physicians and hospitals. The sponsoring agencies are the State Medical Society, State Board of Health, and the University of Oregon Medical School. The registry clearinghouse also conducts education programs on prevention and treatment of poisoning cases.

The majority of cases, 329, or 79%, were in children under the age of five. Two year olds accounted for more cases than any other age group, with 178 reported poisonings, Dr. Ashley indicated.

National Poison Prevention Week will be observed March 17-23. It is a highlight of the Oregon Poison Control Registry and the State Board of Health's year-around crusade to educate parents to practice and teach safety habits in an effort to reduce accidental poisonings in Oregon. Make every week poison prevention week, Dr. Ashley urged.

Safe Driving Awards Go to Highway Men

Four Heppner men of the state highway department's maintenance and traffic division have earned awards for safe driving in 1962, the department announces.

Edwin C. Wilson and John Neilson were among only 129 in the state to get 13-year awards.

Dallas M. McDaniel received an 8-year award and Harold L. Currant a 7 1/2 year award.

At Boardman, Charles L. Potts and Nathan Thorpe received 13-year awards, and Elvin L. Ely a 12-year award.

A total of 1,084 state drivers received the awards, topping the previous record high of 1,053 in 1961. To earn a safe driving award, an employee must drive 55 per cent of the time during the year and do it without becoming involved in a preventable accident. Much of this driving is done during times of foul weather, the report pointed out.
