

BOWLING BITS

By JO PETTYJOHN

WELL, BOTH of the Morrow county bowling teams say they are not speaking too loudly as they lost the first place play-offs the past week! The Padberg Machinery gals bowled Eagle Valley last Wednesday night and won only one game to three losses which gave Eagle Valley the title with Padberg in second. It is not known yet the placings of MCGG or Turner, Van Marter and Bryant. Iris Campbell had high game of 185 for Padberg and Joyce Espy had high series.

THE ELKS team said, "Just say we lost and nothing more!" They did lose all four to Hi-Ho Monday night in the play-offs and have second place. Gene Orwick had high game of 182 and Art Watkins had the series of 492. Guess they were just too nervous to bowl. Anyway Saturday night the trophies and awards will be presented to the Echo league bowlers. A complete story on this will be given next week which will wind up league bowling until next fall.

Enjoy some summer relaxation and go bowling.

TO THE EDITOR.

Dear Editor:

It is of my opinion that an editor and publisher has the right to express his views on critical situations, but to threaten voters does not cover his criteria.

The Morrow county school budget was not defeated by the little "pet peeves" of the voters but contention with the school board and administrator.

Boardman voted for the school budget under duress because they need the support of the board and administrator in keeping their own school. Lexington and Ione voters were threatened that their school would be closed if they did not vote, "yes," for the present budget. Thank goodness these voters did not let fear overrule intelligence.

Listed below are some of the reasons why the present budget is not acceptable to me as a voter and tax payer.

1. Additional salary increases for teachers.
2. Hiring of additional administrative personnel.
3. Duplication of school bus routes.
4. Contradictory reports of costs on the completion of the new Heppner-Lexington High school.
5. Directors and administrator's indifference to the people's suggestions at board meetings, and continuing to make decisions against voters will.
6. General dissatisfaction with the county school superintendent.

You state that each budget election costs money, and delay in getting under way on fiscal matters is also costly. One thing is obvious to the voters that it is costing a million dollars to educate around eleven hundred students. Schools have become a major industry to Morrow county. The tax payer can't afford education at this high cost.

Disension is at an all time high in Morrow county. If the board had allowed the people to vote on the major controversial issues our present situation in all probability could have been avoided.

This is what I as a Morrow county voter have answered. Are these "pet peeves" or would you call these reasons not specific enough?

Although a 4c per pack cigarette tax and increased income taxes have been endorsed by the House of Representatives as the answer to Oregon's 1963-65 revenue needs, strong indications are that the Senate won't see things this way.

These two bills, along with several others approved by the House in its "tax package" to raise about $60 million more during the coming biennium, are now being considered by the Senate Taxation Committee. We talked with its chairman, Senator Boyd Overhulse, who represents Crook, Deschutes, Jefferson and Lake counties. The Madras Democrat is a past president of the Senate. He was elected to that post as a freshman senator during the 1957 session.

"I doubt if the Senate will adopt a cigarette tax," he said, adding that it may not even get out of the taxation committee. "As of now, the committee members are split 4-3 against it. We probably will hold it, until we see if it is really needed."

"If a cigarette tax does pass the Senate, it would only be as a last-ditch measure to meet the state's budget needs," he feels.

"A cigarette tax is not an easy tax to justify," Sen. Overhulse added. "It's just a form of sales tax." He emphasized that he also opposes a general sales tax—an opinion which seems to have strong support in the Senate.

Inasmuch as the Senate Taxation Committee had not heard testimony on the income tax or cigarette tax bills at the time of our interview, Sen. Overhulse said he could not accurately predict the final version of the Senate's tax plan.

"We do hope to come out with a bill that is fair and equitable to all Oregonians," he said. "Of course, there will be some complaining. But that is the people's right. It is also their right to initiate a referendum if they feel the tax is too far off base."

"If they feel that way, that's O.K.," he added. "That, too, is their right, and I'm all for it."

We asked him for his views on the income tax bill (H.B. 1846), approved by the House.

"I think the Senate will modify this bill," he said, "and attempt to get most of the needed revenue from it, rather than combining it with a cigarette tax and the so-called 'one-sho' approaches." Sen. Overhulse implied that the $60 million figure might be too high, and that perhaps less revenue will be needed.

He said that income tax base-broadening is necessary, and that he "favors everybody paying a little toward the costs of government—but not to the point where it creates a hardship on the low-income groups."

He personally favors a minimum filing fee, advocated by Senate President Ben Musa and his wife, Rep. Katherine Musa. This involves a minimum non-refundable charge of from $5 to $7.50 to be paid by each taxpayer. It, in itself, would broaden the tax base.

recently named as one of the nine Sabers pledges. The Sabers, girls' service organization, select their pledges on the basis of grade point average and campus activities. Miss Davis also attended the Newman Club convention in Corvallis the weekend of March 29-31, as one of the Eastern Oregon Catholic Youth club's delegates. Miss Davis was elected Province treasurer at the convention. The Province includes all secular colleges in Washington and Oregon, and a delegation of 80 students was present at the convention.

Residents Study Water Systems

(Held over from last week)

By LOVELLE PARTLOW
IRRIGON—At a public meeting on Thursday, April 18, the majority of those attending voiced approval for obtaining city water for the city of Irrigon. The council will contact an engineering firm to make the necessary survey and to determine the type of water system that will be employed.

Mayor Chester Wilson presided at the meeting, and commended the citizens of Irrigon for their cooperation in civic matters.

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Shingledecker, Ricky and Randy of Ayer, Wn., spent Sunday in Irrigon visiting Mrs. Shingledecker's folks, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Graybeal.

The Morrow County Home Extension Unit held a class Thursday, April 18, on the patio of the Bill Graybeal residence, for project leaders, unit officers and county committee women of North Morrow county. Charles M. Fisher, extension poultry marketing specialist of Oregon State University, assisted by County Extension Agent Esther Kirmis, gave training for the May unit lesson, Poultry Cookery, which will be held at the old cafeteria May 9. Mr. Fischer barbecued the chicken that was later served at the noon luncheon, and held a discussion as to what shoppers should look for when buying fresh chicken, frozen chicken and storage of chicken. He also touched briefly on eggs and turkey.

Mrs. Perry Pummel and Mrs. Bill Schmieder assisted County Health Nurse Velma Glass in the Health Clinic held at A. C. Houghton school April 17.

Riverside Has Annual Banquet
The Riverside High school junior-senior banquet was held in the A. C. Houghton cafeteria Tuesday evening, April 16, in a tropical setting affected by a waterfall, flamingo birds, fish nets and Japanese globes. Attending the banquet in addition to the junior and senior classes was the Riverside High school faculty and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Van Houte. The meal was prepared by mothers of the junior girls, and the sophomore boys served the banquet.

Miss Patti Partlow reigned as queen of the Junior-Senior Prom held at Riverside High school Saturday evening, April 20. Theme for the evening was "Stairway to the Stars."

Miss Sandi Davis, Eastern Oregon College sophomore, was
