Beef Cattle Day Planned May 22

economics department head, will discuss the effect of the European beef market on Oregon cattle.

A West Coast livestock authority at University of California will attempt to answer the question May 22 at Oregon State University's annual Beef Cattle Day.

Reuben Albaugh, an OSU graduate and now extension animal husbandman at U of C will discuss the future of Oregon beef production from a California viewpoint: Can Oregon meet California's demand for feeder stock or compete with them for the finished market?

Beef cattle feeding in Oregon now generates about $53 million annually in local economic activity. However, recent OSU studies estimate it would be $250 million if all beef cattle produced in Oregon were kept here for finishing, with a large percent of the finished carcasses going to the expanding California retail market.

Large numbers of Oregon industries.

Another key speaker, Dr. G. feeder cattle now go out of state for finishing in other areas that have developed grain feeding. Burton Wood, OSU agricultural can Common Market on the beef industry in Oregon and the nation. A. T. Ralston, animal scientist and chairman of the event, said sessions will begin at 8:30 a.m. in Withycombe auditorium on the OSU campus.

Beef marketing cooperatives—their advantages and disadvantages—will be reviewed by LeRoy Wright, Baker county extension agent. Irwin M. Kamper, Albany rancher, will relate his experiences producing beef with-out hay on western Oregon's long-season pastures.

OSU animal science department staff members will report on such varied topics as steps being taken to insure continued popularity of beef; livestock feeding, management and breeding experiments; and performance of Beefmaster cattle under western Oregon conditions. W. A. Sawyer, superintendent of OSU's Squaw Butte branch experiment station near Burns will tell how range improvement in the high desert country is helping stabilize livestock enterprises in the area.

Junior-Senior Social Events Set for Week

A highlight of the school year will be the annual junior-senior prom planned for Saturday night, May 11. Junior class members, under the chairmanship of Ginny Moore, with Don Majeske as assistant chairman, are working long hours this week making final preparations for the big event. Faculty advisor is Pete Glennie. Outside of class members, admission is by invitation only.

The prom will be held in the gymnasium, instead of the multi-purpose room as originally planned, from 9:00 to 1:00. A senior girl and boy will be chosen queen and king, by vote on their contributions to school activities but have not been given much recognition.

The annual banquet for the two classes was held Wednesday evening in the Catholic Parish hall. General chairman was Jennifer Brindle and faculty advisor was Mrs. Grace Schmidt.

Mustangs Lasso John Day Nine Here Wednesday

Diamondmen of Grant Union High, John Day, lapped two home runs, the first coming off the bat of the leadoff man in the first inning, but Heppner High's Mustangs defeated them on the home diamond Wednesday afternoon, 7 to 3.

The Mustangs gained their advantage on heads-up base running by taking advantage of the visitors' miscues.

Fred Harnden, starting chucker for the Heppner nine who retired from the mound in the fourth when he hurt his hand while batting, gave up three hits, all in the first stanza. The first and best blow was the south-paw homerun by Beveridge, the leadoff hitter.

From that point on, the John Day club was handcuffed until the sixth when their pitcher, Jackson, another south-paw, boomed another homer over the fence off Pitcher Ken Smith, scoring a man ahead of him. But that was all she wrote for John Day.

Heppner took the lead in the bottom of the first on two walks, a double steal, a passed ball and ending with Stan Applegate stealing home.

They came to life again in the second for five runs on two walks, an infield hit with the bases loaded, an error on a fielder's choice, and an infield hit by Stuart Dick.

From then on, the Mustangs were blanked.

Harnden struck out two, walked one and gave up the three hits while he was on the mound. Smith finished with four strikeouts, two walks, one hit and one hit batsman.

The two John Day pitchers, Jackson and Williams who relieved him in the seventh, walked seven, struck out seven and hit one batsman. Between them they allowed five hits.

For Heppner, Dick was the top batsman with two safe blows in two trips. LeRoy Gardner had a lone double, and Bill Cox and Carl Bauman each hit a single.

Pitcher Jackson had two for three at the plate for Grant Union including the sixth inning homer.

The victory kept Heppner in the running for a share in the league crown, depending on how league-leading Sherman County fares in its final two games against Pilot Rock and John Day and how Heppner makes out in its final league game at Burns Saturday.

Sherman is now running at 2-0. Heppner and Pilot Rock are each 2-1. Burns is 1-2 and John Day is 0-3. The Mustangs will play early Saturday (at 11 a.m.) in order to get home in time for the junior-senior prom.

Grant Union, unfortunately for them, had to make two trips here to absorb its defeat. They came for the scheduled game Saturday that could not be played here because of wet grounds. Both Heppner and John Day then went to Riverside in the hope of finding better conditions there, but were rained out.

So the visitors went home and returned Wednesday, despite a warning that skies were threatening again, only to take the 7-3 defeat while the rain held off.

John Day 100 002 0 3 4 5
Heppner 250 000 7 3 2
Jackson, Williams (7) and Thurell; Harnden, Smith (4) and Springer.
