Delegates Enjoy Work, Inspiration At 4-H School

Oregon's 1800 delegates to 4-H Summer School returned to their home Saturday night, June 15, after a week of classes, inspira-tion, and fun at Oregon State University. Thirty-one from Morrow county attended.
They elected Vic Suratt, Mad-ras, and Cheryl Miller, Portland, presidents for the 4-H School, and named four other council members — Kirk Gresham, Sa-lem; Wayne Shull, Myrtle Point; Bernice Amundsen, Astoria, and Sally Lais, Corvallis.
Traffic safety and career ex-ploration were emphasized dur-ing the 1963 school. Sgt. William Colbert, state policeman station-ed at Medford, told 4-H members that traffic accidents cost every Oregon family $100 a year whether they're involved in ac-cidents or not, and appealed to youth to help control some of the needless slaughter on the highways.

Colbert said that 484 persons were killed last year on Ore-gon highways. 22,673 injured, and $85 million wasted because of these accidents. Sgt. Colbert, who has taught traffic safety classes for the past 10 years at 4-H Summer School, appealed to Oregon's 34,000 4-H Club mem-bers to take the lead in starting traffic education programs in their home communities.
He asked Oregon's young drivers to obey all traffic rules whether they liked them or not, including stopping at stop signs. One out of four fatal accidents, he said, are caused by failure to stop at stop signs. Drivers cause 98 percent of all accidents; the other 2 percent are mechani-cal. Colbert was made an honorary 4-H member at the close of the 4-H School.
4-H Summer School is one of the largest affairs of its kind in the U. S.
