Ag Department Sounds Treated Grain Warning

Watch that treated seed grain! Don't let it get mixed with this year's harvest that is intended for marketing in food channels.

A slip such as this can mean a great economic loss to the farmer for the grain will be condemned.

That warning was sounded by the Oregon Department of Agriculture following the return of some 42,000 pounds of oats to a Klamath Basin area rancher because they contained treated seed oats.

The truck-trailer load of oats had been consigned to the California Milling Co., Corcoran, Calif. After arrival there of the grain the King County Agricultural Commissioner discovered the treated oats.

Quarantined by California, the oats were released to the Oregon Department of Agriculture for return to the rancher.

The rancher on being contacted by the department assured the department the oats would be cleaned and treated and used only for seed. This means the grain will be diverted to a less lucrative market.

Only grains intended for human consumption come under the regulations of the department. However, the department pointed out that a farmer selling treated grain for livestock feed could be involved in civil action should there be a loss of livestock from eating the grain.

Also department regulations permit no tolerances for pesticides or herbicides in milk and feeding of treated grain to dairy cattle would result in its showing up in the milk supply.

In sounding the warning on treated grain the department also reminded there is a constant watch for residues on fresh produce by the department and processed food for interstate commerce is checked by the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

You're surrounded by clean and quiet warmth when you heat your home electrically. Every room is the exact temperature you wish. Flameless electric heat is as clean as sunshine itself—no grimy walls or drapes. And just as silent, too—no noisy furnace startups.

And think of the extra benefits you enjoy with electric heat! Less redecorating bills! No furnace maintenance costs! No wonder electric heat is becoming so popular, especially here in the Northwest where PP&L rates are far below the national average.
