

New Certificates To Help Promote Oregon Beef

A new idea for gift-giving this Christmas is Oregon Beef Council's "Beef Gift Certificates" program, and is sponsored locally by the Morrow County CowBelles organization, according to Mrs. William Doherty, president.

This new merchandising plan will enable the Oregon beef industry, meat retailers and food stores to get a share of the tremendous flood of dollars poured into Christmas gifts each year, according to Richard Westerberg, chairman of the Oregon Beef Council. It also provides business houses and others who go in for large scale Christmas giving with a new, highly acceptable type of gift.

The idea is a simple one. Any person, firm, or group can buy Beef Gift Certificates in denominations of $5.00, $10.00 or $15.00 from the Portland office of the Oregon Beef Council, Imperial Hotel, Portland, or from any member of the Morrow County CowBelles. The individual or firm then uses these certificates as gifts to customers, employees and friends.

Recipients of the Beef Gift Certificates take them to the food store of their choice, any place in the state, and exchange them for beef, up to the amount of the certificate. The gift certificates are good until used. The food retailer clears this Beef Certificate through his local bank as he would any other check. The money received from each individual or business firm purchasing these gift certificates is deposited in an Oregon Beef Council Gift Certificate at the First National Bank of Oregon. The certificates are illustrated in full-color. As a personal touch, the gift certificates will be inside an attractive, full-color gift folder. Also enclosed in the folder are two tantalizing, interesting, low cost, economy cut beef recipes. An order for certificates appears in the advertisement below.
