State Government Session Slated For Four-H Group

More than 70 Oregon 4-H boys and girls will gain first hand knowledge of their state government during the 8th annual Oregon 4-H Club Conference in Salem February 16, 17 and 18.

Representing Morrow county will be Arleta McCabe and Dale Van Blokland.

Meeting and talking to state officials provides a unique opportunity for these young men and women to learn about their government, its functions and its responsibilities, points out Burton S. Hutton, Oregon State University, state 4-H club leader.

Built around the theme "Know Your State Government," the conference will offer 4-H delegates ample time to ask questions, Hutton explained.

The state capitol building will be the setting for many of the sessions.

Secretary of State Howell Appling, Jr., will welcome delegates to the conference when they assemble in the House of Representatives. Representatives of the House and Senate will discuss the legislative branch of government.

Delegates will meet with Gov. Mark O. Hatfield for a discussion of the executive branch of state government. The role of the judiciary will be outlined by Chief Justice William McAllister.

How state government is financed will be explained by Howard Belton, state treasurer. Sam Haley, legislative counsel, will tell how legislation is developed.

Delegates will learn about the work of the Oregon State Police and state departments of employment, elections and forestry in special group meetings. Arrangements for these are being made by Capt. Byron Hazelton, State Police; David Cameron, commissioner of employment; Lee Harter and Ralph Voris, state forestry department, and Jack Thompson, elections supervisor.

Former Gov. Robert Holmes, Portland, will address the delegates at the February 16 orientation dinner. Warne Nunn, executive assistant to the Governor, will speak at the annual banquet February 17.

Four delegates, 17 years of age or older, will be chosen in interviews, to represent Oregon at the 1964 National Club Conference in Washington, D. C., later this year.

Many of the 4-H delegates at Salem will have had similar experiences on the local level where they received a first-hand look at county government. Hutton pointed out. This program has grown each year as more counties realize the importance of acquainting young people with all levels of government.

The program for the state conference was developed with the Governor's office. The Sears-Roebuck Foundation provides meals and lodging for all conference delegates.
