WORK SMARTER

STRETCH FABRICS are certain to be part of back to school sewing chores this month. New to many people, these are likely to be a disappointment and a waste of money unless handled properly. Knowing a few short cuts can make the difference between success and failure, says Elaine Carlson, Extension clothing specialist at OSU.

Be careful not to distort the fabric when you pin on the pattern or while cutting. The seams of these garments have to "give."

Use a textured nylon thread or a small zig-zag stitch.
Miss Carlson also warns against hanging garments which have vertical stretch. Fold them flat for storage.
