

Morrow Location Offered as Site For Atom Smasher

high energy physics in search of useful knowledge.

The accelerator laboratory requires a rectangular site of about 3,000 acres, and the accelerator itself will be built in a ring with a diameter of one mile. The two most powerful such devices now in existence, both 30 billion electron volts, are at the Brookhaven National Laboratory in New York, and in Switzerland. Some 2,000 scientists, engineers and technicians would be engaged at the accelerator and affiliated would be a visiting staff of some 1,000 research scientists, graduate students and support personnel. About one-third of the total number would be present at any one time.

It is estimated that the installation would take six to eight years to complete.

Locations across the nation are being considered for the installation. There are many requirements on housing, proximity to colleges and cultural centers, air fields, topography, power, water supply, and others to be met.

Clarence Rosewall, chairman of the planning commission, stimulated local interest when he read about the project and sent for specifications for an application. While the Morrow location does not fully meet some of the qualifications, it fits some of the more important requirements very well, he said.

Byron Price of Eugene was appointed by Governor Hatfield as coordinator of Oregon's presentation to the AEC. Price headed the site task force for the Willamette Valley Research Council. He flew to Washington, D. C., Sunday to present the Oregon proposals.

Sticker Program To Start July 1 In Forest Lands

Umatilla National Forest will charge the public to use five of its campgrounds under the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1963 which will go into effect on July 1. It is announced through the office of W. S. (Sam) Miller, ranger in charge of the Heppner Ranger district. The campgrounds include Bull Prairie, Tucannon, Target Meadows, Woodward and Frazier. They are among 2,000 recreation spots on U. S. Forest Service lands, which, with improved facilities, will be charge areas.

Either the annual recreation conservation sticker, a one-day entrance fee, or a seasonal forest fee will be required for admission. The areas in the Umatilla National Forest will be clearly posted to inform the traveling public that the fees are being charged.

There is no charge to drive through the forests, to hike or ride trails, to use the waters, or to hunt or fish. No charge is made in most of the smaller forest campgrounds. Children under 16 are admitted free to the designated areas.

Miller said Wednesday that the Bull Prairie road is now in good condition for auto and trailer travel, although the repair work is not yet completed. The Coal Mine Hill road, however, is still not ready for public use.

The use charges are a part of a nationwide effort to insure outdoor recreation opportunities for the present and future generations of Americans, the Forest Service statement said. Proceeds from the charges will go into the Land and Water Conservation Fund which will be used to assist the states in planning, acquiring and developing outdoor recreation areas and to provide for additional federal recreation areas. An estimated $35 million is expected to be raised from the fees this year, of which the Pacific Northwest is expected to raise $2.5 million.

The proceeds will be split 60-40 between the states and the federal government. The states will receive 60 per cent for use in planning, maintaining and acquiring new areas for state use. The federal government will use its 40 per cent for acquiring new lands. However, only 16 per cent of this 40 cent is spent on acquiring new federal lands west of the Mississippi.

None of the money from the fees will go toward improving forest camps.

Entrance fees to the designated camp grounds are offered in three different ways. First, there is the annual recreation conservation sticker that sells for $7.00 and is good for a year. It will admit a private non-commercial automobile and all its passengers to 2,000 National Forest camps and picnic grounds in the country. In addition the sticker will admit the car into recreation areas administered by other federal agencies. These stickers may be purchased from any ranger station, from guard stations near the designated camps, the supervisor's office or by mail from the regional or supervisor's office.

Second, a single-day ticket may be purchased at each designated charge area on the Umatilla Forest for 25¢ per individual. This one-day entrance fee will permit a person to use the designated campground for a 24 hour period.

Third, a seasonal forest ticket will admit an individual to all designated charge areas in the specific national forest for which it was purchased. This ticket will cost five times the daily rate per person, ($1.25 for the Umatilla Forest) and will be good for the entire tourist season.

There may be additional special charges at areas operated by concessionaires and at a few above-the-ordinary trailer and camp sites where special facilities or services are provided. A map and list of designated charge areas with fee schedules is available upon request from the forest supervisor or regional office of the area which the user plans to visit.

Counties Join To Back Bridge Route for Highway

The joint action was taken after it appeared necessary to present a unified front to oppose the Van Sycle canyon route. Previously there had been strong feeling in Morrow county to back the route proposed via Blalock island, near Boardman.

At the meeting in the office of County Judge Jones Tuesday, a representative group including most of those from Morrow county who attended the Wednesday session, discussed the matter for 2½ hours before deciding that it would be necessary to join with Umatilla county in the best interests of the entire eastern Oregon area.

At the Wednesday meeting, however, Judge Cook and Belt both affirmed that if the Bureau of Public Roads should relent and show favor to the Blalock island route over the Umatilla route as a possibility for the highway, the Umatilla organizations will back it.

Senator Wayne Morse had called for unified action on the part of the area in letters to Belt and said that if this were not done, the Washington interests would surely prevail on the route selection.

Feeling is pretty strong that it may be too late to gain selection of the Umatilla route in view of the strong support given the Tri-Cities route by Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington and the strong appeals being made from the Tri-Cities and other Washington points.

Judge Cook brought out Wednesday, however, that the Van Sycle canyon route, which is much longer than either of the other two proposals, would require construction of five bridges over rivers, as compared with the one structure at Blalock island, and in the case of the Umatilla bridge, the possible addition of two more lanes in the future, although the two lane present bridge is deemed adequate for perhaps 20 years.

At the Tuesday meeting, besides those attending the Wednesday session, were Gar Swanson, Morrow Port Commission; John Venard, Chamber of Commerce, County Commissioner Walter Hayes; and L. E. (Ed) Dick, Chamber of Commerce.

Board Chooses Principal, Votes To Move Office

position at A. C. Houghton.

Sneaks Prohibited

The board unanimously agreed to abolish senior sneak days as a matter of policy after recommendations to this effect had been made by the Ione and Irrigon advisory committees. It was made clear that the action was not taken as a result of any incidents but because of dangers and difficulties involved.

Mrs. Vance Hired

Mrs. Alice Vance, secretary at Heppner High school for a number of years, was hired as district clerk to replace Mrs. Gunderson. Supt. Potter said that a number of applicants had sought the position, but since the office required bookkeeping and accounting ability as well as other qualifications, few could meet the requirements.

Rental Plan Set

The board spent some time in discussing the difficulties encountered in book rental systems at the various schools in the county. Some of the schools are unable to operate their rental systems "in the black" because of frequent changes in textbooks and other problems. It was estimated that for the coming year, the schools of the county must pay between $3300 and $4000 for textbooks, being particularly heavy because of a number of textbook changes this year.

Supt. Potter recommended the county-wide rental plan with the district operating the rental fund. This would mean that the various schools in the county would use the same textbooks, which is not always the case at present, and the texts could be moved from school to school as needed.

The board voted to set aside $3000 to establish the district rental fund, which would be paid back by rental fees from students.

To Buy Buses

Call for bids on two buses will be issued by the board. One will be a 54 passenger bus and the other will be a 66-passenger bus with 36 high-back seats in it. The latter will be used for long trips as well as handle a regular run in the county. The board discussed trading of the "pusher" bus, now on trips, because of its deteriorating condition, but decided to keep it and repair it, using the bus with high back seats to supplement it. The board discussed moving towards a system where each location in the county would have one bus with high back seats to use on long trips. By keeping the "pusher" one more year, this will provide a trip bus for one location, and the new bus will provide for another.

Buses No. 10 and 30 will be traded in. Bids on the buses will include options of gasoline or propane fuel.

Petitions Presented

Irrigon residents presented petitions bearing 141 names calling for the annexation of the north end of the county, including Boardman and Irrigon districts, with northwest Umatilla county. Maxwell Jones was spokesman. Director Harvey Warner said that the residents felt that they should point to becoming a part of a larger system, if possible for the educational advantages afforded.

The board received the petitions by motion and entered the matter in the minutes. No further action was taken.

Gordon Pratt, who has resigned as Heppner High school principal, made a report on progress at Heppner High school during the past several years and also presented a list of 14 recommendations to the board in regard to the high school and the school system.

Further report on his comments will be made next week.
