Everybody benefits when rural electric generate business in the billions

The seeds of our national prosperity take root in rural America.

America's rural electric co-ops do more than generate, transmit and distribute power to the nation's countryside. They also generate business in the billions for people who make and sell electrical equipment for the farm and home . . . and everybody benefits.

When rural electric co-ops were started nearly 90 years ago, with the help of Rural Electrification Administration loans, few people outside the cities had electricity. Today, thanks to the cooperatives and other consumer-owned electric systems, there are power lines everywhere. With the power lines has come a rising standard of living and increased purchasing power for everyone.

Rural power has also put the rural electric consumer in the market each year for more than a billion dollars worth of refrigerators, freezers, milking machines, washers, feed grinders, toasters, heaters and scores of other electrical appliances. This means jobs for hundreds of thousands of people in the cities and in rural communities . . . jobs in manufacturing, distributing and servicing those appliances.

And as the country's power needs keep growing, America's rural electric co-ops, with the help of R.E.A., continue to raise living standards and increase purchasing power.
