Adventist Church Starts Ingathering

The Seventh-day Adventist church will begin its annual appeal to the community this week for the support of its world wide uplift program. Elder Elwood Boyd, announces.

Solicitors are unpaid volunteers from among the church members and include doctors, teachers, students, housewives, and ranchers who contribute their time.

The funds are used for a world program that includes medical, educational, welfare, and evangelistic projects which bring relief and uplift to humanity and a living Christ to the world. Pastor Boyd said. The money received through this appeal comprises about 75% of the total cost.

The church has in America 2225 welfare centers and units in operation. In 1964 almost two million people received aid from the volunteer workers. Pastor Elwood Boyd said this amounts to four times as much as the total funds given by the public.

This ingathering appeal has been made every year since 1903—a longer than 60-year record of community support throughout the United States and Canada.
