Sgt. Jim Chauncey Dies in Okinawa

TSgt. James B. Chauncey, who formerly was stationed with the 636th Radar Squadron, Condon, and was known to many persons in the Heppner area, has died of natural causes at Kadena Air Base on Okinawa.

SSgt. Tom Erwin, also formerly at Condon and now at Mt. Lemmon Air Force Station, Ariz., reported the death to the Gazette-Times. Sgt. Erwin said that the death notice was published in the November 16 edition of the Air Force Times. No details were available.

Sgt. Chauncey was in charge of publication of the radar squadron's monthly newspaper, The Scope, for more than a year and worked with the Gazette-Times in publishing it. He also made appearances at the Chamber of Commerce here and Lone Lions club in connection with his work as public information officer. Sgt. Chauncey is known to business people here, too, through work he did in spare time for the Gazette-Times on advertising. He helped put out one issue of the Gazette-Times when the publishers were gone for a week two years ago, and had anticipated entering some phase of newspaper work upon his retirement from the Air Force within a few years.

Sgt. Erwin took over supervising publication of The Scope after Sgt. Chauncey left for Okinawa, but he was transferred to Arizona about three months ago.

It was during the time that Sgt. Chauncey was working on the paper that The Scope won first place in the United States for base newspapers in its category in the Air Defense Command.
