Fathers Death Calls Al Martin to Mexico

Mrs. Alan Martin, daughters, Debbie and Diane, and baby son, Ross, are spending the holidays without Mr. Martin who was called to Mazatlan, Mexico, by the death of his stepfather, C. R. Dimm.

News of the death arrived on Saturday, December 17, by telegram, and the Martin family spent seven hours trying to call Mrs. Dimm in Mazatlan with the help of telephone operators in Pendleton and of a Spanish teacher from Pendleton High school.

As a result of this conversation, Mr. Martin, who has no brothers or sisters, decided to fly to Mazatlan to be with his mother. He began the journey by commercial airline but found that he would be faced with delays, and with some difficulty, contacted the Jack Summer family who were also flying to Mazatlan, but by private plane. He was able to continue on from Tucson, Ariz., with the Summers. Mrs. Martin has had word by letter of his safe arrival.

According to Mrs. Martin, Mr. Dimm suffered a fatal heart attack; he had only recently recovered from a previous attack. The Dimms had lived in Mazatlan several years since his retirement.

Visitors at the Martin home for Christmas were Mrs. Martin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Souther, Portland, and daughter, Barbara, a junior at the University of Puget Sound.
