Equipment Provided
In the way of equipment, the sum of $3300 for the micro-film machine in the clerk's office will replace present photostat equipment. Cost of this machine would be offset by some $3700 estimated as coming to the office through fees paid to the county for handling documents.

Emergency operations center for civil defense has already been installed in the basement of the courthouse. But the new budget provides for a sum of $600 for civil defense director's salary, $1300 for radio and EOC materials, $800 for wiring, $1000 for emergency shelter facilities and $100 for travel and convention expense.

Budget for welfare shows a welcome decrease, down from $14,672 to $12,438. Jail expense has been dropped by $1000—from $2500 to $1500—and water master's expense is down from $1700 to $1500.

Payment for county and home demonstration agents is up about $900 going to $13,472 from $12,575. This is for the county's share of expense of operating the extension offices and salaries are not included since they are paid through the state.

Insurance Down
Budget for the planning committee has been dropped from $1500 to $1000, and insurance expense shows a decrease to $3000 from the $5000 of the current year.

The general operating contingency fund has been increased from $9,055 to $13,000.

Provision is also made in the budget for the county to become a part of the Inland Empire Waterways association, an organization that has played an active role in working for the Willow Creek project and other developments. A total of $250 is earmarked for this purpose.

Budget for roads, while listed at $318,797, includes $71,409 on loan from the State of Oregon, dating back to the winter floods of two years ago. The total road budget is actually $247,388, only slightly up from the $245,870 of 1966-67.

Budget for the fair and rodeo department lists total expenditures of $78,380 with most items about the same as for the current year with the exception of $43,890 in the sinking fund for a new grandstand at the rodeo grounds.

In the way of resources, the budget shows expected gains in several areas: Trailer license distribution, up to $2,300 from $1,100; Surplus Food refund, up to $800 from $750; cigarette tax distribution, to $6500 from nothing in the current year; 5% excess liquor revenue from the state, $1200 from nothing in 1966-67; justice court fines, estimated to be $12,000 in the coming year as compared to $10,000.

Hearing on the budget will be Wednesday, June 7, in the office of the county judge, and any citizen may come to the meeting to remonstrate, or to speak for the budget.

Marion Green is chairman of the budget committee, and other members are D. O. Nelson and Vernon Russell, together with the county court.

Mrs. Elder Wins $5 in Who's Who; Next Prize $55

Mrs. Maurice Elder of Heppner won $5 in this week's Who's Who contest when her entry slip was drawn Tuesday afternoon by County Judge Paul Jones, acting as judge in this week's contest.

She correctly identified Bill Siewert as the "Who's Who" person of the week, but missed winning $25 more when she failed to list all clues. She had 12 of the 15 correct.

This means that $25 additional will be added for next week's contest so that a person who correctly identifies the week's person and lists all clues correctly from ads in the paper stands to win $55 if his name is drawn from all those entering the contest.

Mrs. Elder listed the following clues: Margaret, Barbara, Jean, Elks, Quaid, cashier, white collar, glasses, from Midwest, William, Nicky, and Orofino.

She failed to list the other three: Paula, Navy, Hillsboro.

Interest in the contest has maintained a high pitch with many entries being deposited in the four boxes each week.

To qualify for the coming contest, the entrant should locate all the clues scattered in ads in this week's (May 25) paper, identify the person and write his name, together with the clues, and the entrant's name and address on a piece of paper. This must be deposited in one of the four stores of the week — J. C. Penney Co., Tum-A-Lum Lumber Co., Elma's Apparel or Central Market.
