

Arthur Allen Chosen District Farmer of Year

By GENE WINTERS
County Extension Agent

One of the more successful Boardman Soil & Water Conservation District annual meetings in recent years was reported by Don Kenney, Irrigon, chairman of the district board, with 60 persons present.

The dinner meeting held Thursday evening, January 18, at the A. C. Houghton grade school in Irrigon had several highlights, according to Kenney. Arthur Allen, Boardman, was chosen district farmer of the year for 1967. Allen, a resident of the area since 1921, has been active in agriculture, business, and conservation over the years. Allen and Mrs. Allen received the plaque awarded by the district and presented by Henry Gantenbein, district supervisor.

The need for land use planning as the district prepares for the future of North Morrow county was stressed by Ted Sidor, Extension Resource Development specialist. Sidor, using colored slides taken from an airplane, showed problems faced by areas and towns on both sides of the Cascades with changing land use. As population increases, he noted, there are more demands of land. People must decide the kind of a community they want and work towards that goal through comprehensive planning. With the development of irrigation and industry in the area close at hand he concluded, pressures on land and services will soon become apparent.

Soil conservation in Alaska was explained by Clarence Underwood, district work unit conservationist. Underwood accompanied a conservation tour to Alaska last year visiting farms and other points of interest. Although many crops can be grown in parts of Alaska, some of these can be produced cheaper in the northwest and shipped there.

Maxwell Jones, Irrigon, was reelected to the board of supervisors. Stan Hinkle, Boardman, was elected to fill the position vacated by Kenney.

Other conservation district supervisors are Paul Slaughter, Irrigon; Arnold Hoffman, and Henry Gantenbein, Boardman.

Dog Obedience Class Winners Announced

A Samoyed dog, "Amy," owned by Mrs. Ron Haguewood, has taken first place honors in the adult dog obedience classes recently held at the fair pavilion.

Five dogs and their owners participated in the 10-week training course, conducted by Mrs. Norman Clow, which was open to all types and breeds of dogs.

Second place winner in the course was a Bassett Hound, "Molasses," owned by Mrs. Alvin Bunch, and third place winner was a Scottish Terrier, "Sam," owned by Mrs. Paul Brown.

Dogs competing in the course learned to heel, sit, stay, and come, the winner being judged on best performance.

Another class in adult dog obedience has been tentatively set for the last of March.

Four-H youth are also participating in dog obedience classes, and are currently studying showmanship, or the proper handling of dogs for judges' inspection. Four-H participants will show their dogs at fair time.

Mrs. Arnie Hedman and Mrs. Walt Jacobs have returned after several days in Seattle attending the furniture market and visiting. Mrs. Hedman visited Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Shockley, former residents here, while in Seattle, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Belmont and family of Tacoma, also her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lemieux and family of Ft. Lewis, Wn. Enroute home, they stopped in Portland to visit with Mrs. Betty Hausler, who is confined at the University of Oregon Medical Center.

Sheep Shearing Schools Slated Across Oregon

By GAIL McCARTY

It takes a college education to do almost anything today, even shear sheep.

For those interested in learning this particular skill, Oregon State University will provide the chance this March and April when students spend two days learning the latest wrinkles in the age-old art of shearing sheep.

Since John Landers, OSU extension animal science specialist, organized the workshop back in 1951, more than 700 Oregonians have taken advantage of the opportunity to learn the best method of separating the sheep from its fleece.

Most of the previous participants have been owners of small flocks who either cannot find a shearer willing to do the job or who wish to save money on the operation. Those enrolling in previous sessions have ranged from FFA members of 16 years old to their grandfather of 60.

The sessions will be held in Corvallis, March 18-21; Grants Pass, April 16-17; Roseburg, April 18-19; and Ontario, April 1-2.

Landers and Dean Frischknecht, OSU extension animal science specialist, will teach the course. Sheep shearing machines will be provided for the students. The sessions will cost each student $1 per day. Each class will be limited to 16 students.

Application forms are available from county extension agents or from local FFA advisors. All equipment is furnished by the OSU Cooperative Extension Service.

Hoof and Horn Club Makes Year's Plans

Plans for the year were outlined by the five junior leaders of the Hoof and Horn Livestock club at its December 10 meeting. The leaders are Alfred Drake, Teresa Harshman, Sue Greenup, Larry Pettyjohn and Steve Pettyjohn.

New members were introduced, and each member was told when he would be giving a demonstration.

At the January 21 meeting Steve Pettyjohn gave a demonstration on "How to Give a Demonstration" and Sue Greenup presented a program on "Beef as a 4-H Project." Included in the program was a movie on beef from the feedlot to the table and a discussion of literature available to members to assist them with different phases of their projects.

SCHOOL LUNCH MENUS

For days of January 26-31 Friday, January 26—Split pea soup, cheese sandwiches, canned fruit and milk.

Monday, January 29 — Meat loaf, mashed potatoes, carrot and raisin salad, rolls, Jell-O and milk.

Wednesday, January 31—Pizza, carrots and celery, fruit dessert and milk.

Out of town relatives who were in Heppner to attend funeral services for Mrs. Millie Doolittle on January 21, at the First Christian church, were her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Doolittle, a son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Perrott, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Iverson, all of Portland, also Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rood of Elgin. Mrs. Doolittle passed away January 19 at Pioneer Memorial hospital at the age of 84.

Wheatmen Bypass Support of NFO

At the regular quarterly meeting of the Oregon Wheat Growers League executive committee meeting held last week in Pendleton, considerable discussion took place on the National Farm Organization withholding action.

The following statement was adopted by the League.

"We recognize the value of limiting market offerings of farm commodities as a means of raising farm prices. We also recognize that much of our U. S. farm production is exported and must remain price competitive in order to be sold, and that a withholding action which is not accompanied by efforts to adjust production so as to reduce total commodity supplies will not be beneficial in the long run.

"We feel that the Oregon Wheat Growers League cannot support a withholding action that does not also propose realistic means to protect export markets and adjust total supplies."

Also during the meeting the new officers were installed with Bill Hulse of Dufur as president; Tom Vaughan, Jr., Pendleton, first vice-president; and Dick Skiles of Wasco, second vice-president.

Standing state committee chairmen were announced by President Hulse. Selected to head the federal agricultural programs committee was Don Thompson, Moro; marketing by Glen Brogitt of Helix; transportation by Allan Pinkerton of Helix; production and land use by Willis Nartz, Ashwood; public relations by Bob Brogitt of La Grande; taxation and legislation by Larry Kaseberg, Wasco; youth activities by Malcolm Fargher, Dufur; finance and membership by Dick Skiles; and domestic wheat utilization, Mrs. Gail McKinnis, Summerville.

Louis Carlson of Ione will have charge of the Conservation Man of the Year contest due to being the immediate past state winner.

Hayes Honored On Anniversary

By MARY LEE MARLOW

BOARDMAN — Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hayes were honored on the occasion of their 46th wedding anniversary Saturday evening when their sons and daughter-in-laws, and their sons-in-law and daughters held a surprise dinner party for them at the Elks Club in Hermiston.
