ing any of the shorelines or waters of the state. According to the Game Commission, this is one of the provisions of the new anti-pollution law now in effect.
 The law provides that it is unlawful to discard any glass, cans, or other trash, rubbish, debris, or litter on land within 100 yards of the ocean or any other water except in receptacles provided for holding such material. It also prohibits a person from discarding similar material in any waters, including the ocean. Several fishermen have been arrested in recent weeks for violations of this nature, Phil Schneider, state game director, indicated.
 Schneider urged fishermen and hunters, as well as other outdoor recreationists, to discontinue the all too frequent practice of using the public waters and beaches as a dumping ground.
 "Take your debris home with you," he said, "Don't spoil another person's recreational outing."
