Train to Return

The miniature Union Pacific train, which appeared in rodeo parades two and three years ago, will make a return appearance at the rodeo parade on August 24, Ron Bishop, U. P. agent, said after receiving confirmation from the company. Randall Peterson, chairman of the parade, had requested that the freight train be brought back for an encore appearance. Since it is in demand for events all over the west, it is necessary to ask for engagements far in advance.

Mrs. Jim Follensbee is at home and recovering nicely following minor surgery recently in a Walla Walla hospital. Her husband brought her home on Saturday, January 24.

Social Security Applicants Urged To Avoid Delays

About one of every five applicants for Social Security disability benefits delays so long before making his application that he risks possible loss of some payments, Vernon A. Welo, district manager of social security in La Grande, said.

In an effort to remedy this situation, the Social Security Administration is asking anyone who might possibly qualify for disability benefits to get in touch with a Social Security office as soon as possible. "Some people fail to apply because they don't realize that they can benefit from the program," Welo said. "Younger people often think that Social Security payments are only for people in their sixties, whereas the disability program was specifically set up to protect the wage earner who is forced to stop working before he is old enough to collect retirement benefits."

A person under 65 can receive monthly payments if he has a physical or mental impairment that has kept or will keep him from working for a year or more. Individual benefits range from $44 to $152 a month. If the worker has dependents, total family benefits can amount to as much as $339 monthly.

"Others don't file because they are under the impression that they have to be permanently disabled. This was generally true before a 1965 change in the law, but now payments can go to a person whose disability has lasted, or is expected to last, for 12 months or longer," Welo pointed out.

Benefits begin after a person has been disabled for six full months. No benefits can be paid for months during this "waiting period." Also, the law limits the back benefits a person can collect to the 12 months before the month in which he applies.

This means that the latest a person can file without losing any back benefits is the month that comes after the 18th month of his disability. (These 18 months cover the waiting period and the 12-month limit of retroactive benefits.)

A recent social security survey shows that at least 19 percent of disability applicants file later than this, thus risking loss of benefits they might otherwise have received. An undetermined number of disabled persons do not file at all, and so miss out entirely.

Welo cautioned, however, that benefits can be paid only if a person's disability is severe enough to prevent him from doing not only his usual job, but also any work in keeping with his age, education, and experience. And, to be eligible, a person must have worked under social security for at least 5 of the 10 years before he became disabled.

Benefits continue for as long as the disability lasts, or until the beneficiary reaches 65. At age 65, disability benefits are converted to retirement benefits, without any change in the amount.

Currently, over a million disabled persons—plus more than a million of their dependents—are receiving benefits under the program. "If you know of anyone who might qualify," Welo urged, "tell him to phone, write, or visit the La Grande social security office, or see the Morrow county field representative at the old city library, next to the Heppner city hall, on the second Thursday of the month. Your tip may lead to his not losing out in whole or part in this benefit that is meant to help replace earnings lost because of disability incurred before the retirement age."
