CAPT. JAMES E. WICKELL, base commander at the 636th Radar Air Force Station, Condon, reviews one of the many Armed Forces Day posters and leaflets that were distributed throughout nearby counties.

Public Invited to Attend Armed Forces Day Events

Armed Forces Day, May 18, 1968, will be observed to the fullest at the 636th Radar Air Force Station, Condon. Capt. James E. Wickell, site commander, has planned and scheduled a full day of activities for any and all persons who plan to visit the squadron on this special day.

Armed Forces Day Open House at this squadron will be held from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and all facilities will be open to the general public. Free movies, refreshments, tours, and a softball game, as well as many other activities, will be on the agenda.

Captain Wickell said that many hours have been devoted to this year's program. "I am pleased with the progress that has been made, and I am confident that this year's Armed Forces Day will be one of our best," he said.

Captain Wickell invites everyone to participate in the 1968 observance of Armed Forces Day which honors the courageous men and women of our forces for freedom.

Good Samaritan Center Located In Hermiston

Work of the Hermiston Good Samaritan Center in Hermiston is described by the Rev. Karl G. Berg, manager, who states that some in the Morrow county area may not be aware of details concerning the center.

"The Good Samaritan Society is a venture of faith on the part of its founders and members," he states. "Starting from one small frame house in 1922, it will have grown to more than 114 homes in 1968 with a capacity of more than 8,300 residents."

The Hermiston Center is one of two located in the State of Oregon, but most of the homes of the Society are located in the Central States.

The Hermiston Center is licensed to take care of 50 nursing care guests and another 40 may be cared for in its retirement facilities, licensed as a home for the aged. All guests are under 24 hour supervision by a full time registered nurse, other nurses and nurses aides.

The Rev. Berg seeks to meet the spiritual needs by regular visitation of patients, Bible studies, and devotions. Other pastors, churches and individuals are also cooperating with regular services, activities, and visitations to bring variety and enrichment to those who are making the Center their home.

The Society was incorporated in North Dakota, as a non-profit organization, and is dedicated to caring for the aged and ill. Organized by a group of Lutheran pastors and laymen, it is evangelical in scope, but its facilities are open to all people.

The Society is not owned nor subsidized by any Lutheran Churches, but it is an organization of Lutherans who are concerned with providing Christian Homes, the Rev. Berg states.

"Its concern is for the spiritual, as well as the physical, mental and emotional needs of those who make their home in any of our centers," the manager said. "All Homes are open to all reasonable hours for the residents to receive guests."

Principal office of the Society and its regional director and staff is located in Sioux Falls, S. D. A 15-member board of directors serves without remuneration and meets regularly to plan and coordinate the work of the various centers, although the responsibility of the administering of the local Homes is left with the local manager.

Communities Must Plan for Growth, Ted Sidor Says

Need for communities to plan for growth was stressed by Ted Sidor, Corvallis, community development specialist of the Oregon State University Extension Service, in a talk before the Heppner-Morrow county Chamber of Commerce April 29.

By 1976, Oregon is expected to have a population of 2,380,000 persons, he said.

"What resources are we going to need to handle them?" he asked.

Communities which presently have light populations can be hit by developments. With an upsurge in numbers come many problems—need for sewer systems, zoning and others.

Using colored slides taken from the air to illustrate his talk, Sidor, in a rapid-fire presentation, showed how some communities are developing without planning, sprawling over a wide area. Homes are built indiscriminately, cutting up agricultural lands, and they surround small tracts, causing an increase in land values that make it impossible for the owner to continue to farm.

Sprawling communities require many services—water, sewer facilities, and others.

"Until we solve this problem of sprawling communities, we are never going to solve our tax problems," Sidor said.

He indicated that construction of the Willow Creek dam could bring an upsurge of population here.

Sidor pointed out how people move to Oregon because of its beauty and scenic attractions and then start to destroy the things they came to Oregon to enjoy.

Increases in population require regulations for orderly development, and thus, because of the increase in numbers, people start to lose their freedom.

Sidor told of the difficulty in establishing zoning in various parts of the state, but said, with tongue in cheek, that if it is called "resource allocation" it seems to go over better than if it is called "zoning".

In his picture presentation he showed some slides of good examples of zoning, including the community of North Powder.

Area surrounding the town was reserved as agricultural land and the home and business development was confined to a central area. When the vacant lots are full, the city will only then seek to expand into the agricultural area, he said.

Sidor, who was presented to the Chamber by Gene Winters, county extension agent, met with directors after the meeting for consultation concerning projects planned here.
