SATURDAY WAS a pretty cool day for a shower outdoors, but Don Evans didn't mind a bit when he capped the artesian well on the Evans ranch. Camera here catches him shutting off the flow. On Monday, he reported the well was operating 11 sprinklers without a pump. He expects to irrigate 171 acres from the well, including permanent pasture east of the Lexington highway where no irrigation has been done before. (G-T Photo).

NO, THE ARTESIAN well didn't dry up on the Evans place. A drenched Don Evans in this photo has succeeded in capping the well and shutting off the flow. Roy French of Pendleton, who dug the well, stands by Evans. French said that he dug another well, also an artesian, with a smaller flow on the Dallas McDaniel place on Rhee Creek after digging the Evans well. When the Evans well produced a good supply at just over 230 feet, decision was almost made to stop there, but Evans decided to go deeper and the well came in as an artesian in just about 12 feet more. Talk Centers On Communication At School Meet

Ways of improving communication were discussed by a group of concerned parents, teachers, and students at the Heppner High school Monday evening. The meeting was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Dick Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Weatherford, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Abrams and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Warren who contacted 40 families. Thirty people attended.

After discussing possible format of the group for the coming year and a variety of problems, a pilot committee volunteered to work out a questionnaire based on the HHS Student Handbook, which will be revised during the summer.

On June 26 all parents, students, and teachers are asked to meet at the HHS Cafeteria to fill out the questionnaires and discuss the most controversial issues. Among the knotty problems mentioned were the honor cards, student cars, student lounge, and open campus. This meeting will start at 8 p.m.

The pilot committee will hold its first meeting in the HHS library next Wednesday evening, June 5. Those on this committee are Mrs. Jim Bloodworth, Mrs. Bud Peck, Mrs. Earl Ayres, Mrs. Garry Tullis, Mrs. Robert Jepsen, Mrs. Ernest McCabe, Mrs. Bud Marshall, Mark Tullis, Bob Peck, Jim and Denise Bloodworth, John McCabe, and Julie Ayres.

The group will continue to meet during the summer to evolve plans for meetings during the coming school year.

Those calling the Monday night meeting stressed that they felt that lack of effective communication was a serious barrier in the local school situation. Though the Heppner High PTA has not been successful as a means for improving relationships, the possibility of a Parent-Teacher-Student Association was suggested because such a group has been effective in many communities. The association was not urged, however, because PTA representatives stated that they are concerned primarily with ways to work together in harmony rather than restructuring the organization.

Club Plans Picnic
