Service in Depth

From Rural Electrics

Franksly, most rural electric co-op linemen don't work under water. But to provide the kind of service rural electric consumers have learned to expect, they'll go anywhere.

Ask the members of the Lake Erie Rural Electric Cooperative who live on Kelley Island in Lake Erie. When a freighter's anchor fouled their power cable, linemen from the co-op donned wet suits, borrowed a ferry boat and went to work.

Within hours service was restored. Reliable and economical service is the foundation of the rural electric's philosophy. It is such service-in-depth that helps make the rural electric systems a vital link in this nation's electric power industry.

"We had ideal weather for the whole trip until we neared Pendleton," commented Mrs. Sarah Adkins, who returned to Pendleton on Sunday from nearly a month's trip to St. Louis, Miss., where she went early in December to spend time visiting friends and relatives.
 Mrs. Adkins stayed with her 86-year-old sister, Mrs. T. E. Hogan, in St. Louis, and visited with numerous nieces and nephews. She also visited her brother, Rosco Buchner, and another sister, Mrs. Ruby Wallace, with whom she did some sightseeing in her home town of Rollo, Miss., where she was born and raised. Mrs. Adkins, who made the trip east by train, said also that she was delighted with the opportunity to visit old friends and relatives, some of whom she hadn't seen for 52 years, since she lived in the area as a girl.
