Young Oregonians At Summer School See Ex-Miss America

"The prettiest girl never wins a beauty pageant!"

That's the opinion of a former Miss America, TV personality, and mistress of ceremonies at many beauty pageants since she won the "big one" at Atlantic City.

Miss Marilyn Van Derbur came to Oregon State University to speak to the 1800 young Oregonians attending 4-H Summer School program.

Why doesn't the prettiest girl win?

"Because she's been accepted and appreciated for her natural physical appearance, and that gets her by for a time."

"But the girls who aren't so pretty develop personality. This comes from getting involved, developing confidence, accomplishing something. It's their vitality and zest for life that make them winners."

The pretty girl, Miss Van Derbur continued, may come on stage—and be terrified. She just hasn't worked as hard at learning to speak, or done as well in class.

Switching to boys, she said it's not the "natural athlete" who's the winner, either. He's likely to wind up in the B class. But the fellow who has to train, and fight for his place on the team, develops the skill and stamina to carry him through to the top.

The very attractive Miss Van Derbur, in private life the wife of a Denver attorney, Lawrence A. Atler, has been talking to youth groups for five years. She has found them respectful and interested, she said.

But she says the communicator has a responsibility to be prepared, excited, involved—and to remember that the audience is made up of young adults—

"That's what they are."

"They will seek advice from parents and counselors, but they will eventually make their own decision about what they want to do. Their goal must be their own."

"Goals and Dreams" was the title of her talk to the 4-H youth at OSU.

"You can decide what to make of your life—you can be whatever you want to be," she told them. "But your success or failure will not depend upon genius, talent, natural physical appearance or strength, health or luck. It will depend on work, desire, discipline, on having a definite goal that you want to accomplish by a definite date."

About the dreams, Miss Van Derbur said, "If you never have a dream, then how can a dream come true for you?"
