Congressman Al Ullman called the tax reform package approved July 31 by the House Ways and Means Committee "the most sweeping tax reform legislation in this century."

Ullman said, "The meaningful reform proposed by the committee is a giant step forward toward restoring equity to our tax structure." He added, "Those individuals who have escaped taxation through a number of loopholes would now find their way blocked. Corporations that have flourished under tax shelters would find much of this protection removed. On the other hand, low and middle income taxpayers will greatly benefit."

The Committee completed four weeks of closed-door sessions, producing a bill for House approval that effects changes in some 40 major areas of the tax code. Main features include a cutback in oil depletion allowances, tighter restrictions on tax rules governing capital gains and introduction of a minimum tax to ensure that all U. S. citizens pay some tax.

Key provisions of the committee's bill are significant tax relief proposals for low- and middle-income taxpayers. The standard deduction would be gradually increased from 10% to 15% by 1972, with the ceiling for this deduction raised from $1,000 to $2,000 over that period. A general tax rate reduction amounting to 5% by 1971 is also included.

The House unit held 30 days of hearings on tax reform beginning last February under its chairman, Representative Wilbur Mills (D-Ark.)

Ullman, a senior member of Ways and Means, expressed particular pleasure at the committee's decision on tax treatment of municipal bonds. The unit approved Ullman's plan to broaden the commercial bond market for state and local governments by introducing a system of new taxable bonds. A payment of 30-40% would be authorized under the bill to help state and local governments pay the higher interest rates on these bonds.

At the same time, Ullman was successful in removing proposed restrictions on tax-exempt bonds purchased by banks and corporations. By a vote of 173 July 30, the committee approved Ullman's motion to maintain the tax-exempt status for interest earned by commercial holders of municipal bonds. Private individual holders of these bonds, however, would now be subject to tax on their interest under a separate ruling.

"The committee's action has a two-fold effect," Ullman said. "It gives states and local communities an optional approach to financing new capital improvement projects. At the same time, it eliminates the tax shelter for those few wealthy individuals who have avoided income tax by investing heavily in tax-exempt municipal bonds."
