Fall's first art exhibit in the downstairs gallery of the Walter M. Pierce library at Eastern Oregon College will feature works by Korean school children and by an EOC student artist.

This simultaneous exhibit will be open library hours until Saturday, October 25.

Works by elementary school pupils at Chonju Teachers' College were brought to EOC last year by Kyung Shik Kim, the college president. The college is about 100 miles south of Seoul, capital of Korea.

The minimal art of Richard Heilner, an EOC artist, stresses clean surfaces meticulously done, according to Ian K. Gately, gallery director and assistant professor of art.

"I feel that paintings should fit specific rooms," the artist said. "And by that I mean bedrooms, living rooms, bathrooms, dining rooms, kitchens, and so on. My paintings are meant as decoration."

Oregon Traffic Toll May Reach All-Time High Record in 1969

Oregon's 1969 traffic death toll is threatening to equal the state's all-time high recorded in 1965.

The Motor Vehicles Division says 493 people were killed during the first nine months of this year, one more than for the comparable period in 1965.

Fifty-one people were killed during September. This compares with 46 for that month last year.

Non-collision, head-on or fixed object types of collisions accounted for 25 of the state's fatal crashes during the month. The agency noted that drivers should adjust driving now to meet changing road and weather conditions with the advent of rain and snow in some areas of the state. Darkness also is coming earlier, requiring drivers to turn on headlights earlier in order to see and be seen.
