First National Bank Up in Deposits And Loans

First National Bank of Oregon closed out the "Soaring Sixties" by posting record net operating earnings for the seventh successive year, it was revealed by Ralph J. Voss, president of the statewide banking system.

The Heppner branch reported deposits of $6,950,464 and loans of $7,193,237 as of Dec. 31, according to Harley Sager, manager.

Comparable totals for the branch a year ago were $6,634,468 in deposits and $6,900,741 in loans.

Earnings for the bank in Oregon for the year totaled $13,888,819, a gain of $1,974,192, or 16.6 per cent over the year-end 1968 figure of $11,914,627, adjusted for changes in accounting prescribed by the regulatory authorities. On a per share basis, this is equivalent to $2.61 compared to $2.25 last year, adjusted for a five for three stock split in September.

Year-end statement of condition figures for First National showed a new loan record and a decline in deposits from the end of 1968.

Loans Increased

Loans increased substantially to $1,165,101,249, up $134,701,226 from the $1,030,400,023 recorded December 31, 1968. Deposits were $1,589,229,303, down $78,056,475 from last year's record total.

Voss said the deposit total reflects the massive outflow of public funds into other higher yielding money market investments. Public funds on deposit were down more than $110 million from a year ago.

Resources at year-end climbed to $1,917,289,955 from the $1,850,243,932 reported at year-end 1968, and capital funds plus the reserve for possible loan losses increased to $130,067,582 from $120,038,860 last December.

Rapid Expansion

The "Soaring Sixties" was a fitting description for First National's growth as well as the Oregon economy during the decade just completed. Virtually all categories of bank statistics doubled during this period of rapid expansion, the bank president said. At the end of 1959, earnings were $7 million, deposits were $878 million, loans $488 million and total resources were $971 million. The number of branch offices throughout the state increased from 82 at year-end 1959 to 118 at the close of 1969.

In September, the bank observed the ninth anniversary of the dedication of its five-story, half-block addition to the Portland head office by beginning excavation for its new $40 million headquarters complex. It will include a 40-story tower and an adjacent five-story operations center to be located on a two-block site in downtown Portland. The 536-foot tower will be the tallest building in Oregon and the second highest north of San Francisco. Completion will be in 1972.

During 1969, First National opened the Valley River branch in Eugene, the bank's 118th branch in Oregon, and established a Far East representative office in Hong Kong. At the year-end, the bank held approved applications for seven new branch offices of which four should be opened during 1970.
