Remember This? . . .

Reminisce!
FIFTY YEARS AGO
Thursday, January 29, 1920

Walter Rood sold his Heppner Flat ranch, consisting of 960 acres of fine wheat land, to Alex Green this week. The price paid by Mr. Green was $55,000. The deal was handled by Roy V. Whiteis. Mr. Green is farming the Taylor Hill ranch just south of town. This place was sold recently to Ewing P. Berry of Lexington. We understand that Mr. Rood will go into the stock business.

Matt Halvorsen, formerly a merchant in Ione and one of the large wheat producers of that section, spent Saturday in Heppner and attended a meeting of the Morrow County Farm Bureau.

Mrs. Wesley Brannon, Mrs. Henry Selby and Kenneth Bleakman, all of Heppner, are recuperating from surgery performed in Condon by Dr. Hayden of that city.

J. D. Butcher, traveling auditor for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., was up from Portland a few days last week. He went to Lexington on Saturday in company with local manager, Ralph E. Crego and Chief operator, Miss Flossie Barlow, where they changed the switch board from the Burgoyne store to the Vance residence.

A real county fair is what the members of the Morrow County Farm Bureau have had in mind for some time, and their ideas were brought out clearly last Saturday evening when a committee from their organization met in the office of County Agent Hunt with a committee from the Heppner Commercial Club.

A. Henrikson, Cecil stockman, was appointed Chairman and S. A. Pattison, secretary of the Commercial club was appointed to keep the records of the meeting.

A committee consisting of nine men was appointed to draft a definite plan for the organization to be submitted to the county court at its next regular meeting. The committee consists of L. A. Hunt, F. R. Brown, C. R. Paine, Matt T. Hughes, Jack Hynd, John Wightman, S. A. Pattison, M. D. Clark and A. Henrikson.

Notes From The Library
About "In This House of Brede" by Rumer Godden.
Philippa Talbot is a successful London career woman turned 40 when she feels the call of the religious life. "I thought I was very well as I was," she told Brede Sacristan later, "a human, balanced person with a reasonable record; with the luck of having money, friends, love. Only suddenly it wasn't enough." She is one of the most attractive and sympathetic characters in Rumer Godden's long and well-loved fictional roster.

This, then is a story of the life in an enclosed house of nuns and of the relevance of this contemplative existence to our changing world—a challenging theme. The novel unfolds chiefly through Philippa, from the day of her entrance, through one crisis of mind and heart to another, until she faces an ultimate and almost unbearable sacrifice. Woven with her personal story is a much larger one—the story of the House, its history and the present inmates who have vowed to live and die within its walls.

The nuns are English Benedictines whose House is centuries old in tradition, a stronghold of faith and prayer, yet they are up-to-date, alive, aware of the world — and matter of fact. In Rumer Godden's hands, they are fully realized individuals whom we come to know and care about, adding rich dimensions to the novel as they live out their vocations.

Through them, the book gives us on the outside a picture of how everyday religious life is lived, day in, day out "without sloth or haste" as St. Benedict's Rule lays down. Part of the novel's attraction is its clear and abundant showing of the meaning of that life to those who live it, of its rules and ritual and this makes the most uncommon and fascinating "shop".

It is the mark of Rumer Godden's unique magic that she immerses the reader wholly and unforgettably in the cloistered yet universal existence of her House of Brede.
