Ione Garden Club Prunes City's Trees

The Ione Garden Club of the Oregon Federation of Garden Clubs, Inc., met at the home of Mrs. Frederick Martin on March 11, with Mrs. Tom Huston and Mrs. Kenneth Klinger as co-hostesses.

The study theme of the meeting was "Planting to Please" presented by Mrs. H. S. Huber, which consisted of landscaping techniques, flower and planting material used in landscape design. Mrs. Huber and Mrs. Martin were sent by the Garden Club to attend course 3 of landscape design held in Corvallis in October, 1968. Mrs. Huber's report was based on material received and references recommended from that school.

A surprise drawing and exchange of flower containers was held. They were from the collection of the late Mary Lundell and donated to the Garden Club by the members of her family.

Mrs. Willard French, president conducted the meeting and members answered roll call with "their favorite flower in landscape design."

Mrs. Vida Heliker read a letter from John R. Leach (formerly of Lexington and remembered as "Doc" Leach), inviting the Garden Club members to visit his gardens sometime in May. Mr. and Mrs. Leach have a home located on Johnson Creek Canyon and 122nd Ave., at the foot of Mt. Scott, and known as "Sleepy Hollow". They have traveled extensively and have brought back plants, shrubs, and flowers from foreign countries to complete a beautiful 5 acre botanical garden with available picnic area. Tours are conducted through the garden by reservation. The members voted to accept the invitation and the date will be announced later.

April 22 was the date set for the annual spring plant sale. Mrs. Martin reported that $10 had been donated from the Club for the support of Oregon Federation of Garden Clubs State projects. On the Friday, Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Garland Swanson accompanied Rev. Edwin Cutting of Heppner, Fred Martin, and Roy Lindstrom, who pruned about 60 street trees. The club wishes to thank these men for their assistance.

Those appointed on the nominating committee were Mrs. Lee Pettyjohn, Mrs. Ernest Christopherson, and Mrs. Kenneth Klinger.

Mrs. Frederick Martin presented Mrs. Willard French with a National Council Club President's Pin, which belonged to Elaine Rietmann, and was donated to the club by members of her family.

Fifteen members were present, and the following guests: Mrs. Floyd Anderson from Arlington, Mrs. Mabel French from Worland, Wyo., Miss Emma Peterson and Mrs. Adon Hamlett.

Mrs. Martin showed slides of their recent trip following the meeting.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Palmer of Lexington, on April 8, and will be "Constructive gashing, air layer, and grafting."

Parents Announce Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hodges of Portland announce the engagement of their daughter, Brette Kathryn McFadden to Larry Hrabik of Tigard.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamlin visited Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Puffer in Walla Walla last weekend. The men grew up together in Gresham and were also in the Panama Canal Zone together.

Women on the Go!

Just home from three weeks visit to India is Mrs. John Graves, Hardman. In her talk to the Soroptimists Thursday she said the practice of the English when they ruled India was to take all of the raw products from India and process them in England. Now India is striving to process their own products. Two things England did for India was to establish Middle Schools and build railroads. Dialects differ in India from north to south and east to west. English is now taught in the public schools as well as in the mission schools.

A down-to-earth person, Mrs. Graves says she chose not to take pictures of the agony of India, the filth and leprosy and the beggars. When urged to visit museums, she told them "Your streets and by-ways are the museums I want to see."

They went by put-put (a three-wheeled vehicle) to see the sights. Bicycles are the most popular mode of travel.

A bicycle must be locked when left or it is stolen. As is anything else left unguarded.

Her slides told the story of the market scenes where the stalls are laid out in the streets. The wash is done by the men slapping the garments against the concrete tubs in the open. The women may hang them up to dry.

Wood as fuel is unheard of. The primary fuel are "patty cakes" made from cow manure. It is fashioned by hand into large size pies, dried, stacked and sold. This is just one of the home industries that the government encourages.

Women were seen cutting rice with scythes. This at a time when the 3rd atomic energy plant had just been dedicated.

A village is from 1000 to 5000 people. The hand pressed bricks used in making the houses are fired at a low temperature. When the monsoons come the bricks wash away and the homes are rebuilt. The bricks are another home industry as are the making of pens, swigger sticks, cigarettes (not made from tobacco).

Their Hindu temples and grounds are beautiful. The grass surrounding the handsome Taj Mahal was being mowed with a cow pulling the lawn mower.

The extremes of India were in the pictures of the camel pulling a plow when in the distance could be seen a power line that looked like the BPA line leaving the Columbia's dam. Mrs. Graves noted that here their farms were all mechanized long before electricity came to the ranch.

She was an honor guest at a wedding in the country of Corrig. This fantastic affair of 3-days was attended by more than 3000 people. All of them were guests of the bride's parents. Meals were served in a long outdoor dining room with only a roof. The bride and groom had never seen each other. The wedding had been arranged by the parents. The "pedigree" of the bridegroom is examined as this cattle woman said, "like a prize bull". The parents offering the most for the bridegroom for their daughter is the one chosen. The bridegroom's parents keep the money.

The couple receives the blessings and rice offerings of family and friends and then they go to the home of the bridegroom's parents for the last of the ceremony. One of the requirements of the wedding ceremony here is for the bride to carry a jug of water on her head a distance of some 3 blocks. This is to show that she will be a dutiful and hardworking wife. The bridegroom's friends

DOT'S JOTS

Well Tuesday is the Green Day and the Heard's are enough Irish that all were "wearin' the green" including our dog Dewey. I tried at St. Patrick's Day dessert that I can hardly wait to taste to see if it is as good as it looks . . . but it's full of calories. I try a different recipe each year. The year I tried the Irish Soda bread, my family thought I shouldn't try it again.

But speaking of our dog, Dewey . . . his tail is a conversational piece. The kids in Pilot Rock said he has a prehistoric tail. He used to have a beautiful plume but the vet said he had eczema when he lost all the hair. Anyway he's our faithful fellow. He's always had a friendly tail and it wags lots.

Our oldest grandson, Mike and Dewey are the same age. When Mike was a little guy he said, "I like the tune Dewey's tail plays". It plays different tunes as it rubs on paper, hits against the metal of the appliances or against the wood cabinets.

He's like some people . . . old before his time and too fat! We do have him on a restrictive diet and he is losing weight . . . which is more than you can say for Charlie and me!

BUT we hope you all had a Happy St. Patrick's Day!!
