5 million families just like yours

O. J. Grayson, plantation owner, banker, ginners, and cattleman, in Fort Necessity, Louisiana, is president of the Northeast Louisiana Power Cooperative at Winnboro.

Mrs. Robert Rengel, farmer's wife and mother of three, has been a director of Corn Belt Electric Cooperative, Inc., Bloomington, Illinois, for the past six years.

Dr. B. W. Gibbs, a dentist in Star City, Arkansas, finds time to be a member of the board of locally owned C & L Rural Electric Cooperative Corporation at Star City.

operate their own rural electric systems

Fred Schones operates his own barber shop in Selfridge, North Dakota. He also serves on the board of Mor-Gra-Sou Electric Cooperative, Inc., with headquarters at Flasher.

Milton B. Scott, partner in a general store in Pinetops, North Carolina, is also president of the board of Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corporation at Tarboro.

Jack Zavadi, editor of the weekly newspaper at Humphrey, Nebraska, is a member of the board and treasurer of the Cornhusker Public Power District at Columbus.

These six consumers are the kind of people who own and operate America's Rural Electric Systems. They are typical of the rural people who found it necessary to join with their neighbors, borrow money from the Rural Electrification Administration, and build their own electric power systems to get electricity.

The REA doesn't own or operate a mile of line. It acts only as a banker whose job it is to make and collect loans and interest. Ownership of America's 1,000 rural electric systems rests solidly with the five million families—the 20 million people they serve. They're as local as your newspaper and as private as your signature.
