Prepare for Fair

By BIRDINE TULLIS

4-H thoughts turn to fair preparation at this time of year. Members and leaders should be giving thought to contents, demonstrations, and entries.

Fair premium books were mailed out in May. Any member or leader who did not receive a premium book may obtain one at the County Extension office.

Some new contests and events have been added. Members are urged to study the premium book and decide the number of events in which they wish to participate.

Events such as demonstrations require planning and practice. A 4-H meeting provides a good audience for practice demonstrations.

Participation in judging contests also need previous thought by members and instruction from leaders to be meaningful to members. Some material for helping members with home ec judging events may be obtained at the county office.

Fair provides the opportunity for members to show what they are doing and learning in 4-H projects. It is intended to be a learning and growing experience for the member. All 4-H leaders, parents and members are encouraged to call the 4-H extension staff at any time help is needed in preparing members for the fair.

Boardman News

Vickie Gaymon, Roberta Acock, Darnette Leighton and David Richards. They were accompanied by Mrs. Marge Shade and traveled on the Morrow County bus.

They attended 3 classes each morning with a choice of many subjects ranging from animal science to modeling. Recreation was important, too, with swimming available, several parties and an opportunity to get acquainted with young people from other areas.
