Routine year-end business was the order for the July Council session. The funds not in immediate demand in the general checking account were transferred to an interest bearing account. A final payment of $2067 was made on the City backhoe. The preliminary census report received by recorder Ruth Coy, set the city's population at 252. This is 53 below the 305 on which per capita allocations have been made for the past 2 years. It will be a loss to the City of $1,000, should this number be certified in October.

Linda's Life As A German

Germans have a habit of shaking hands whenever they first meet and when they part. It is kind of difficult to get into the habit of extending your hand as you say "Gutan Morgen" or "Gutan Nacht". We are so used to just saying good-bye or Hi, and letting it go at that.

Germans don't drink water, and if you have ever tasted theirs you would understand why. But once in a while, I crave a drink of water and my family thinks I'm wierd when I drink a glass instead of coke, which I'm drowning in, or Citronala.

Potatoes, wurst, bread, and salad from their garden, are our mainstay. For breakfast and dinner we make sandwiches of wurst and bread, and for mittagessen, lunch, we have salad, potatoes, and some meat. They have about 100 different kinds of wurst, some are good; some I eat but don't care for.

We eat breakfast about 7:30, then the girls go to school. It ends this Friday. They each take with them a sandwich to eat during a break. It is wurst and bread. We eat lunch about 1:30. Frau Schabo gets home from work about 1:00 and Ute and Ingo come home from school about 1:15. After dinner we do the dishes, which have been collected since yesterday lunch. The dishes are washed but not rinsed, just dried, yet they don't have a soapy taste or film.

One night when we got home at midnight, Frau Schabo cooked a pheasant for us. She is a large stout woman who speaks no English, and since my German is very limited, at times it is very discouraging.
