The Lone Rock

By AGNES DAVIS

The "Lone Rock" is among the most photographed rocks in Oregon and the white spiral church built by its side fits into the picture. Picnickers and travelers often lounge in its shade, and many have succeeded in climbing to its top. The highest point is 75 feet.

Some years ago a group of boys living here were hunting for pigeon eggs and found the birds were nesting in the crevices of the big rock, 60 feet or more above the ground. They could not reach them so they climbed up the rock and tied a rope around a 6 year old boy and lowered him over the edge. He was filling his pockets with eggs when his mother, Mrs. Lyons appeared on the scene. She nearly fainted when she saw her son dangling in the air on a rope. However, he was pulled up unharmed by the other boys and all were happy that no eggs were broken.

TURN ON

WITH

ELECTRIC HEAT

It's "Turn On" time. Will your present heating plant make it through another winter?

Now is the time to study and investigate. Why not do what most people have done — switch to electric heat?

There's a type of electric heat to fit the needs of your home. Whatever type of heating plant you have, it can be easily converted to electricity.

And, remember that electricity brings you the totally clean heat. No smoke. No soot. No open flame.

When your heating plant turns on in the mornings, let it serve as a reminder that now is a good time to convert to electric heat.
