

Steve Warren Says 'Life Is Different in South America'

Steve Warren, a tall handsome young man back from 27 months in South America admits he's having some adjusting to do. His two shocks were seeing the men in uniforms wearing beards and long hair cuts and the length of the girls' skirts. They were wearing them much shorter in Venezuela and Colombia where he has been on a Mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

He was in six different cities; the two largest were Bogota in Colombia with 3 million and Caracas, Venezuela with a population of 2 million. The sizes of which call for more adjustment to the size of Heppner. He paid for his board and room with local families each place he stayed. Differences in prices are unbelievable. Pop is 3c in American money, movies and haircuts 30c, gasoline is 15c a gallon. However, there is a terrific tax on imported cars. Cars that sell for $3000 here sell for $7000 there.

More and more American products are appearing in the stores. They are produced in the country itself and are much cheaper than the American version. There are such brand names as Gillette, Pepsi Cola, VO-5, Colgate. These firms provide local employment.

There are many thieves in the big cities. Steve knows on several occasions when attempts were made to pick his pockets. He feels he was fortunate not to have had a single loss but some of his companions lost cameras, money and pens. He felt there was little animosity shown him. On occasions students and a few older guys showed that "Yankee go home" attitude. For the most part, he said he felt the South Americans have a family attitude towards the United States. As in some families though the feud may be bitter.

Christmas time lasts until Jan. 6, Independence Day and at the Bull Fights, they shoot off lots of fire works. He attended his first Bull Fight just a few days before he left. There are many local bull fights but this one was a traveling bull fighter from Spain. He received $19,000 for killing the two bulls. There was a tense moment when the bull caught the fighter's cape in his horns and dragged him down on the ground. He gored his leg and the bull fighter was carried from the arena. However, he returned under his own power and killed the bull, much to the delight of the spectators. After the bull is killed, the meat is sold outside the arena. The bulls bred specially for bull fighting, cost 2½ thousand dollars each.

Steve came home with a few souvenirs, a machete, some paintings, some leather work.

He saw lots of coppersmiths at work. Many gold artifacts in museums are a testimony to the skills of by-gone generations.

Learning the Language

Before leaving for his Mission, Steve took a crash course in Spanish. At first the language proved a barrier but not for long. He is anxious to talk with his brother, Mike, student at BYU, who says he can still remember his Spanish from his Mission in Mexico. Mike returned about 3 months before Steve left. This is a program practiced by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He has received four deferments by his draftboard, for his two years while attending Rick College at Rexburg, Idaho and his 2 year Mission. He is excited at entering BYU for the second semester early in February. He is interested in Political Science and also mass media. He wrote an article in Spanish on a general church activity that was published in one of the papers. He also did some printing in the mission office on off set.

Newspapers were made up similarly to those in the United States, devoted to world news, national news and local news. They use lots of color pictures and played up the last Cassius Clay fight when his opponent was from South America with lots of colored pictures. Lots of things happened while he was away, Nixon was elected, Eisenhower died, man landed on the moon. He said he felt that the South Americans really lauded the moon landing more than we did in the United States. The governments are not stable and could be overthrown by the military or another party.

Gone something over two years, he had to re-establish his identity at the bank. He walked into Gonty's and showed Ed the shoes that he bought there just before he left. He had them half-soleed four times while he was gone. It wasn't very long before Ed recognized him.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Warren, his family is delighted to have him return home. He is enjoying a change in diet from rice and starches as his mother makes his favorite dishes. He was amazed at how tall Matt had grown while he was gone. He appreciated having his grandmother, Mrs. Ray Drake, send the Gazette-Times to him each week and he said "I really missed my little sister."

About 20 per cent of birth defects are caused by faulty genes, according to the March of Dimes.

Bench Chatter

By KEVIN DICK
Coach Clough has been trying to find a more balanced scoring attack. Friday night he found no such combination. The second high scorer had eight points—that's not enough.

Saturday, three scorers were in double figures. Gary Watkins came off the bench late in the first period and sparked to 22 big points. As usual, Van Marter led with 23 but Kemp should be up there too. He works hard on rebounds and gets a lot more than anyone else on the squad. He should come back up and dump it in.

Steve could really help the scoring power of the team with a few more points a game.

Watkins, who was cold Friday night with Condon and missed some critical foul shots along with the rest of the team, didn't start at Umatilla. When he went into the game (late in the first quarter) he knew what he was there for. Gary dumped 22 onto the board in the remaining 3 periods.

Sherman County will host the Mustangs Friday, Jan. 22 and the Horsemen will entertain Stanfield here Jan. 23. Heppner defeated Sherman on their last meeting, 46-41. The Mustangs haven't met Stanfield yet this season.

Mustangs Dumped in Non-League Meeting

By DALLAS HARSIN

A 35-point fourth quarter for the Wahtonka Eagles dropped the hopes of the Heppner Mustangs.

At the end of the first quarter, the score was all tied up and after that it was Wahtonka all the way. When the final horn sounded, Heppner was down by 25 points, 68-93.

The Mustangs shot 50 per cent from the field but just didn't put up enough shots. Heppner also shot 50 per cent from the gift line, but Wahtonka still shot better.

La Verne Van Marter led the scoring again with 27, followed by Sam Bellamy with 12.

Logan led the Eagles with 19, followed by Griffin with 15. Wahtonka also had four other Eagles in double figures.

When talking with JV Coach Ed Hiemstra, he wasn't too happy as they also lost 53-41. While talking to one of his players, Coach Hiemstra said "most of the team doesn't care if they win or lose" and this is probably the reason for the two quick losses.

The JV's have only made 86 for 368 at the gift line for 23 per cent this year.

tend. This exploratory program planned for small schools is in line with the district's attempts to develop a program in Career Education. Answers to some of the questions, "What should we be offering?" may be gained from districts who are already in the program. The district's program must be submitted by May 1.

Etta Mae Lovgren's resignation from Heppner's Advisory Council was accepted and Harley Sager was appointed to finish out the terms. Mrs. Eddie Gunderson, member of the board, was appointed to work with the teachers to review the front portion of the district handbook.

Jack Sumner announced that the consultation committees expected to finalize the teachers salaries at the Jan. 19 meeting at Riverside.

Bus Bid Accepted

Five bids were received for the 30-passenger bus body. W. J. Root & Co's bid was accepted to supply a Carpenter body for a price of $2,788 plus $500 delivery for a total of $3,288.

There were two bids received to supply the chassis. Fullerton Chevrolet bid of $3,688.30 with a delivery price of $500, for a total of $4,188.30 was accepted.

This brings the total figure to $6,976.30 and the budgeted figure is $8,000. The last 30 passenger bus the district bought in May was $6161. Mr. Daniels noted that the district should receive $600 to $800 for the old bus if a buyer could be found.

Other body bids came from Allied Bus and Truck Equipment $3,866. Cascade Bus Sales $4,041. Schetky Equipment Corp. $3,720.60 and $3,570.60. The other chassis bid was Heppner Auto Sales for $4,367.67.

Merle Jewett of Allied and Chuck Rogers of Schetky were present to make their own presentations.

The next regular meeting of the board will be Feb. 15 at 7:30 p.m. at Riverside High School.
