

Factors Listed For Garden Plans

By HAROLD KERR
Extension Agent

The success of your vegetable garden depends on the choice of location. Choose a place in full sun away from trees or excessive shade. Level areas are usually more satisfactory. The garden should be considered part of the landscape. It is usually divided from other sections of your grounds by a low fence or other visual barrier.

Size
Planting a garden too large is an often encountered problem. It takes some time every week to maintain and water it. A 20 x 50 foot garden will require an hour or so weekly to weed and water.

Plot Plans
Garden plot plans are desirable. Map out the scheme, keeping in mind short-season vegetables that mature quickly and others that require longer to mature. Spacing between rows is important. The closest that rows can be grown is one foot. Eighteen inches would give more room to maneuver.

Planting
Succession planting and intercropping provide greater cropping from your garden space. Succession planting means planting the same vegetable several times during the season for continual harvest and planting in a space vacated by the harvest of another. Intercropping means planting early-maturing crops between rows of long season plants.

Variety Choices
Choose varieties carefully. There is lots of difference between them. In general hybrid varieties are sturdier, produce more and have superior flavor. Disease resistance is also very important.

Weed Control In Your Garden

By HAROLD KERR

Weeds continue to be one of the biggest problems of the home flower and vegetable garden.

There are a number of herbicide techniques which can be used to ease the chore of controlling these weedy pests.

Fumigation two to six weeks before planting can be a real useful technique. Care must be taken to avoid areas where roots of trees, shrubs or perennials may come in contact with the fumigant. Black plastic has been useful in many areas. Any black plastic is useable to simply cover the soil. It tends to increase soil temperature and reduces moisture loss.

Many flowers and ornamentals show tolerance to herbicides such as CIPC, Eptam, Atrazine, Simazine or Casaron. Roses tolerate Simazine or Casaron. Pines, Arborvitae, Caragana and Juniper are tolerant up to 3 pounds of Simazine. Bulbs are tolerant up to 1½ pounds of Simazine for the control of annual weeds.

Atrazine, Simazine or Diuron can be used to control weeds in driveways, parking areas and around foundations.

The use of herbicides and other techniques can save a lot of work when it comes to keeping the yard and garden free of weeds. Be sure to get specific recommendations when using these measures.
