

THE MAIN ST. bridge is gone. The water is back in the channel but running bank to bank.

STILL running bank to bank. The bridge is gone to Dave Flanagan. Water was window sill high. In the 1969 flood, they didn't get any water in their house. They live at 330 So. Main, first house above the swimming pool.

SAM STEERS mobile home lost some underpinings but no water got in.

MUD and water up the side of Donna Bergstroms shows how high it got as the water straightened out Shobe and came across McDaniel's and Buschke Apts.

LOWER end of town saw damage too. John Ceglia said the heavily loaded truck on the left was moved 50 yards down the street. Mud and debris is piled up on the truck and touring car.

MOPPING UP. The volunteer firemen swish off the dried mud, street by street. Kids in front of City Hall watch Dean Gilman, Riley Munkers, Jerry Sweeney and LeRoy Gardner.

HOW IT'S DONE. A scoop at a time. Mud and debris was hauled off by the truck loads and truck loads and truck loads. This shot was taken showing Lyle Jensens. They got more yard and fence damage than they did two years ago.

VOLUNTEERS confer on a mechanical breakdown of the scoop being used at the Dave Flanagan drive-way. Harold Curnutt, Hurley Kohlmen of Portland (brother-in-law of the Roy Quackenbushes) and Darrell Coppeck.

THE NEXT MORNING. Just a step across!
