PGE Looks at E. Ore. for 2nd Nuke Power Plant

Fran Warren, president of Portland General Electric Company has said his firm feels they will be in need of a second nuclear power plant by the end of this decade.

Mr. Warren said the company wishes to file notices of intent for construction permits within the next six months. That way, he explained, the chances of winning approval of at least one site would be heightened.

No application for a construction permit may be made until a year after notice of intent has been filed. The council has another year to study the application, and construction can't start for another year after the permit has been granted.

But nothing can be started until after site studies of the entire state have been completed, and this could take some time.

But Kessler Cannon, the governor's natural resources coordinator, suggested that the council consider sharing the task with the utilities, since the council won't have adequate manpower to do the job quickly.

After the statewide studies have been done, the council legally could shorten the time period for the start of construction of a nuclear plant.

Warren said that the law means construction couldn't start for 3 1/2 years unless the time period can be shortened by a waiver. And it would take another 4 1/2 years for the plant to be constructed.

Warren said that without shortening the time period a second plant couldn't be completed until mid-1979, and that by 1978 the system will already have an energy deficit.

While PGE wants to file notices of intent on several sites, it plans only one more nuclear plant at present. Warren said the company is flexible about site, but said PGE is looking most closely at Eastern Oregon. A federal-state task force has identified several possible locations in the general area from Arlington to Pendleton along the Columbia River.

Warren said the company is considering allying itself with farm groups, which might be able to use warm water from the nuclear power cooling system for irrigation. This would make the plant cheaper to build since a cooling tower wouldn't be needed.

PGE is building the state's first nuclear power plant at Rainier in Columbia County. It is expected to be in service by September of 1974. But even with the power it will produce, Warren said PGE will have an energy shortage one or two years later.

In answer to a question about whether PGE is considering investigating the possibility of developing underground steam resources, Warren said, "We're actively interested."

But he added, "We don't regard it as an immediate source of large quantities of power."

The council set its next meeting for July 30. The principal business will be to interview candidates for the top executive job in the council, that of coordinator. (AP).

Retirement Trip To Indianapolis

Mrs. Adrain Bechdolt has had a wonderful start on her retirement with a fun trip to a Bechdolt family reunion at Indianapolis. Mr. and Mrs. Bechdolt accompanied by Adrian's brother, Archie Bechdolt, flew to Indianapolis for the reunion. There were 47 present. The Bechdolts last attended the reunion 15 years ago when they went back. They were driven here and there by their many relatives all over the state of Indiana. They were impressed with the crops this year which are "simply marvelous". The miles and miles of flat land are planted to corn and soy beans.

They returned home by bus. At Rapid City, Iowa, they stopped and took two 8-hour Gray-line tours. They went to see the Bad Lands and Rushmore Memorial. They termed both of these "fabulous" and think everyone should see them both. They came home by bus.

This was their first flight. At Chicago they had a jarring experience. They were held in the air during a terrific lightning storm. The storm knocked out the computer for landing and take-off. Planes were lined up at the airport for take-off so it was sometime before they were able to take off on the last leg of their journey to Indianapolis.

Ione Garden Club

"You have to have a mature plant with flower and seed pods, if possible, all so the roots of some weeds to make positive identification." Mr. Martin Zimmerman, Gilliam County Agent, told the group of Ione Garden Club members at Mrs. Lee Pettyjohn's ranch home July 14.

Club members brought the following weeds for Mr. Zimmerman, purslane, chickweed, sow thistle, nightshade, knotweed, lambsquarter, chinese lettuce, oxalis and fleabane.

"What's the best way to control weeds around gardens and yards? Of course, the best way is by cultivation with the "ole hoe". The hoe has some modern and effective helpers in form of herbicides. Mr. Zimmerman named four particular chemicals the home or farm gardener could use when the home land gets tired and overworked.

Most useful around shrubs, roses, bulbs, iris, perennials, foundation plantings and established annuals is Simazine. Very effective for edging grass and driveways, brick or flagstone walks, Controls foxtail, tar weed, and cheat grass.

Dacthal is good to use in vegetable gardens to prevent germination of weed seed.

Amine is used on broadleaf weeds, such as dandelions.

Casseron is used on perennial weeds such as quack grass, morning glory, and Russian knapweed.

In discussing lawn problems with Mr. Zimmerman, he suggested planting new lawns with 1/2 bluegrass and 1/2 creeping red fescue seed. The bluegrass will grow well in sunshine and the red fescue in the shady areas.

Delegates Mrs. Van Hubbard and Mr. Ed Cutting and State Board Chairman, Mrs. Fred Martin gave their reports on the state convention held in Portland June 21-22-23.

Potluck was enjoyed at noon by members. In the afternoon the hostess served homemade ice cream and cinnamon rolls.
