One Lousy Day

But for only one lousy day the recent city election would have been OK. There must, by law, be a certain number of days between the notice and the election. The publication day and the election day are not counted.

So again on Nov. 8 from 8 until 8 . . . the election will be held again at the City Hall. Everyone is urged to vote . . . yes. On the basis of the first election, the city entered into an agreement with Farmers Home Administration for a grant of $7500 for the changes required in sewer and water and power lines before the Corps of Engineers could come in and do the Shobe channel work.

The bond issue for $94,000 will finance three vehicle bridges over Shobe and one footbridge over Willow, guard rail along Cannon St., and repair and repaving at the Swimming Pool.

The $94,000 will cost about $1.31 to $1.33 per thousand dollars true cash value of your property depending on the interest rate on the bonds. It is assumed that the bonds will be sold for about 5% to 6% interest. Repayment will be over a period of 15 years.

Someone with a house with a true cash value of $10,000 will pay about $13.10 a year to repay the bond. According to Joyce Bergstrom, County Assessor, the average true cash value of homes in Heppner will run between $8,000 to $10,000.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OPEN LETTER TO HON. GOV. TOM McCALL

My most sincere appreciation and highest commendation for the remarkable, just, worthy position, you have taken to protest the importation of Portuguese bull fights into Oregon. We have great need for more Legislators like you. True goodness requires us to respect the lives and rights of all creatures. Mankind has a medieval mind and a genius for dreaming up sporting events involving animals, such as wrestling with toothless, declawed bears, dog fights, cock fights, coon-on-a-log, chasing helpless wild life in deep snow with snowmobiles, steer-busting, one-sided rodeo acts, hooking and tying sheep. And now the Portuguese bull fights, as a new dollar-making gimmick to entertain the gullible public, because the recent decline in P. I. rodeo patronage is admitted.

It's most interesting to note that Editor Martin of the Eugene Register Guard argues that the bull fight was scheduled partly to eliminate complaints about cruelty to animals at the exposition rodeos held in the past. He said, "The bull fight is much more compatible." These bulls are restricted and abused no way close to what happens to rodeo bulls." How about that for a change? When rodeo promoters admit rodeo cruelty.

Many thanks to all concerned: Humane societies with leaders like Graziella Boucher, Warren Cox and Gene Burgess who have raised their voices against more animal cruelty being added to Oregon's entertainment list.

Would like to quote a line of Billy Graham's. "I believe all Christians should feel a responsibility for all God's creatures. Love for animals is instinctive in normal human beings, and to mistreat dumb animals is not only un-Christian it is inhuman."

To substitute one $$ evil for another as Mr. Martin suggests, is compassionless and merciless.
Most sincerely,
Lois Winchester

To the Editor:

You know, I've looked all around the county for a Toyota dealer, I wonder where these officials buy them? Seems like if they are good for personal economy, they ought to be good for public economy and we might be seeing them sporting county and possibly even state emblems.
W. W. Weatherford

To the Editor:

I went to the football game at Heppner last Friday night and saw a Mustang team, nineteen deep and generously laced with freshmen and sophomores, fight their hearts out against a heavier and more experienced team from Elgin.

Although those kids lost the game by a score of 22 to 0, they won something that will stick with them a lot longer—the admiration and respect of their community.

For what it was worth, I want them to know that I am very proud of them, and that they all stand about a foot taller in my sight.

Sincerely,
Clifford A. Williams

Dear Editor:

Portland seems different than "When I was a boy".

Downtown on one corner are young monks in yellow robes, shaved heads with a dangle of hair at the back, girls in long dresses — all chanting "Hare Krishna" over and over and hippies of course.

Up our way for awhile was a huge sign "Topless — lunch" pasted on a black tavern. I was never sure who was topless, waitress or ?? — but I'm sure it wasn't the customers as I only saw young men enter. Now the sign is gone.

P.S. A tang of winter in the air.

Dear Editor:

Well with all the good care F. W. has been receiving he will soon be as good as new.

His daughter, Anabel Allison, has made several trips up — one time bringing a housekeeper.

His granddaughters, Jan and Jo have also been up. Jan is administrator of the Portland Medical Center and Jo is taking nurse's training so they are not idle down here.

Weed Control Chemicals Talked

New weed control chemicals were the main topics of discussion at a recent meeting held at the Lexington Grange Hall, reports Harold Kerr, Morrow County Extension Agent.

Don Rydych, Pendleton Experiment Station Weed Researcher, discussed the results of his weed plots throughout the Columbia Basin.

Chemicals which appear to have been superior to 2,4-D in the trials include Lorox, Igran, Maloran, Broxomil, Karmex and Broxomil, Lorox and Broxomil, and Brute plus Uran.

All of these chemicals yielded from 3 to 6 bushel more than the 2,4-D plots. Not all of these chemicals are registered for field use this year, but should be by next season.

A serious weed pest in the county is knotweed. Tests indicate that Broxomil plus Dicamba gives the best results. Spraying should be in February or when the knotweed is in the 2-leaf stage.

Timing is extremely important when using these newer chemicals. Be sure to read the label or check with the chemical representative or Extension office if you are not sure of the proper time for spraying.

Many growers have been asking about cheatgrass control. None of the recommended chemicals give 100% control, but economical benefits may be obtained if you have a serious infestation.

Igran and Lorox may be beneficial if applied after the cheatgrass has sprouted but before emergence. This is on recently seeded land.

Treflan can be used as a pre-plant treatment. The chemical must be incorporated with a harrow or similar tillage tool.

I.P.C. is a winter fallow treatment applied on the stubble to reduce cheat growth and reduce tillage needed in the spring.

BE SURE TO READ AND FOLLOW DIRECTIONS ON THE LABEL!

Flood Victims May Apply for Tax Reduction

Owners of residential property destroyed or damaged by fire or an "act of God," including floods, windstorms, etc., this year have until Nov. 23 to make application for a reduction in assessed value under a law passed by the 1971 legislature.

Application forms are now available at the county assessor's office. Applications are to be filed with the assessor and the governing body of the county.

The new law provides for a reduction in assessed value for owner-occupied residential property destroyed in all or in part by fire or an act of God prior to July 1 in any calendar year.

The true cash value of such property is first reduced by the true cash value of the land and then by the true cash value of any improvements thereon on the 90th day following the act of destruction.

This residual is prorated according to the number of months remaining in the calendar year after the date of destruction during which the property could not be occupied as a residence.

The amount of taxes to be abated or refunded is determined by multiplying the amount of net loss by the rate percent of levy applicable to the property in the tax year to which the reduction of assessed value is applicable.

The county assessor will first make a determination of the amount of tax, if any, to be abated. If the taxpayer disagrees with this determination, he may request a hearing from the county governing body. The latter's determination will be final and not appealable.

In addition, the property owner may be able to claim a casualty loss deduction on his 1971 Federal and Oregon income tax returns. Detailed information on casualty losses is included in the Federal instructions.
